RYAN GIRL WAS POISONED

ARRAIGN MEN IN TRAGEDY

Miss Esther Ryan, the twenty-one-year-old girl of Everett and Cambridge, in connection with whose death in Cambridge yesterday Bernard Le Hand and Joseph St. Pierre have been arrested, was killed by an overdose of some drug.

Medical Examiner William D. Swan, who performed an autopsy on the girl's body at the Cambridge Hospital, found that she died of asphyxia, caused by an overdose of some drug, administered by person or persons unknown, also that the girl had been a drug-user before.

MEN BEFORE COURT.

This was shown by the state of the girl's stomach, the contents of which were sent to Professor Whitney of Harvard for analysis.

Le Hand and St. Pierre were arraigned today. Le Hand is thirty-one, single, lives at No. 101 Orchard street, Somerville, and is a stenographer in the Standard Oil offices in Boston. St. Pierre is thirty, married, with two children, lives at No. 199 Walden street, North Cambridge, and is one of the proprietors of the Russell pharmacy, corner of Massachusetts avenue and Russell street, North Cambridge.

Le Hand and St. Pierre were held in $2,500 bail each on manslaughter charges for a continued hearing on March 30 by Judge Almy in Cambridge court, after pleading not guilty. Arrangements were begun to get bail.

Before the arraignment Inspector Edward Welch and Patrolman William Mullins of the North Cambridge police went to the office of Clerk of Court Forbes to swear out the complaint.

NAHANT FIRE VICTIMS AND COTTAGE MYSTERIOUSLY BURNED

William J. Minton and, above, his wife, Mabel Killilea Minton, who were burned to death.

The Minton home photographed after the fire

William J. Minton, fifty-six, and his wife, Mabel Killilea Minton, were burned to death early today by fire that nearly destroyed their cottage on Sunset Hill, Nahant.

Minton's body, badly burned, was found on the floor of his chamber at 2:40 a. m., and that of his wife at 6:40 in a closet of the same room. The woman's body was burned almost beyond recognition.

The cause of the fire is unknown. It was discovered by Miss Sabina Killilea, Mrs. Minton's sister, who was awakened by the smoke. She ran to rouse the others and found they were in the bathroom for water with which to fight the fire. Miss Killilea went downstairs for water. She was unable to get back on account of flames and smoke. She saw nothing more of her sister or her brother-in-law.

It is evident that Minton and his wife were overcome in the chamber. Mrs. Minton, it is thought, stumbled into the closet where her body was found, thinking it was the door to the hall.

Miss Killilea notified Nahant fire headquarters and the fire was put out soon after their arrival.

Minton has been a life-long resident of Lynn and Nahant. He was a prominent Elk and for years a leading singer in St. Mary's Church.

He married Miss Mabel Killilea, his second wife, about three years ago.

He leaves four sons, William J., Jr., assistant postmaster of Lynn, Thomas, Leo and Frederick.

EITEL FATE WAITS ON WILSON

WASHINGTON, March 13.—With the testimony of Captain Kiehne of the American ship William P. Frye, the inquiry into the sinking of the ship by the German raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich, directed by President Wilson, was brought to an end today. It was stated that no further testimony would be taken unless developments in the case disclosed some new evidence. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Peters hurried back from New York to be on hand to receive the captain of the Frye, who was summoned from Newport News to tell the story under oath of his experiences with the Kaiser's sea rover.

Captain Klehne of the Frye reached Assistant Secretary Peters' office shortly before 11 o'clock and was taken at once to the State Department for a conference with Counsellor Lansing.

William D. Sewall of Sewall & Co., Bath Me., owners of the vessel, also was present.

Captain Klehne made a sworn

BROOKLYN TAKES UP HER POST

The United States armored cruiser Brooklyn, the only vessel of Sampson's fleet which suffered at Santiago, where she was Admiral Schley's flagship, early today steamed down the harbor from the Charlestown Navy Yard to President Roads, where, at a station between Deer Island and Long Island, she will be in a position to see that American neutrality is not violated.

One suggested explanation of the Brooklyn's movement was that she was to prevent any concerted dash to sea by the German liners which are in shelter here from the English cruisers which control the North Atlantic.

The fact that the German cruisers Dresden and Kronprinz Wilhelm are raiding commerce in the South Atlantic made it possible that the government at Washington feared an attempt on the part of one or more of the German vessels here to slip to sea without clearance papers, carrying supplies to these raiders.

Port officials today explained the status of the German vessels in harbor. The German vessels are not interned. An interned vessel is one which is held by a neutral power and not permitted to leave port. The German vessels here are simply merchant vessels; and upon making application in proper form for clearance papers and receiving those papers would be free to leave port at any time.

Concerning the possibility of any "dash to sea," Charles Huehlemein, Boston agent of the North German Lloyd Line, said today:

"Such talk is silly. Take the Amerika, at the Hoosac Tunnel docks. Other vessels are tied up around her, so that to get her out would mean moving all of them, an operation requiring time. Furthermore, her crew is way below normal, and like all the other vessels, her provisions and coal are only sufficient for her needs from day to day."

Captain Polack of the Kronprinzessin Cecilie said:

"The suggestion is ridiculous. In the first place we have only a skeleton crew aboard. In the second place we burn 700 tons of coal a day when we are steaming, and we have never had more than a thousand tons aboard at any time since coming here. To coal for a voyage of even a few days would be an operation that would attract the attention of the whole waterfront, and any talk of a secret dash for sea is absurd."

MACON, Ga., March 11.—Baseball men in citizens' clothes, lounging in the hotel lobby to fight over again the battles of last season; and the same young gentlemen in their uniforms on the baseball grounds, cavorting like young colts, pitching, whacking, throwing, catching and running as the ball flies and the spirit wills, are as different as frilled lamb cutlets are from raw beefsteak.

They are more different; it is man civilized and man natural and both the same man. We get so accustomed to our trim coats and creased trousers that we are prone to think we are they, and to forget what is inside of this tailors' masquerade. By and by something pops up—a fight, a panic, a street joke, a railroad accident—and we revert for a space to the primitive, forsake our nice society discipline, and roar, laugh and jump like a pack of cavemen.

We would soon dwindle out of existence if these unguarded and un-self-conscious moments did not surprise us once in a while, and social groups which do become wholly estranged from them actually grow brittle and bloodless and perish of dry rot or race suicide, objects of their own veneration to the last, but missed by nobody. Thus does nature

THAW SENT BACK TO TOMBS; OTHER DEFENDANTS FREE

NEW YORK, March 13.—Harry K. Thaw was found not guilty today of the charge of conspiracy in connection with his escape from Matteawan Asylum. His four co-defendants, who aided in his escape, were also acquitted.

Shortly before noon the jury, which had been deadlocked since it retired at 5 o'clock last evening, came into court and requested that Justice Page furnish its members with a copy of the testimony given by Thaw in his own defence and also with a copy of the Court's charge.

Up to that time it had been believed that the jurors were hopelessly deadlocked.

It became known today that on the first ballot taken by the jury the vote stood five to five. Two members refused to vote on the first ballot.

THAW SENT BACK TO THE TOMBS.

The four co-defendants were discharged, and Thaw was sent to the Tombs until Monday pending the decision in a motion made by his counsel, Morgan J. O'Brien, Jr., that he be returned to New Hampshire, from where he was extradited for the conspiracy trial.

The jury reported at 12:15 o'clock after nineteen hours deliberation. When the verdict was announced persons in the court room and corridors broke into cheers.

Franklin Kennedy, deputy attorney general, today received a blackhand letter, signed "Chief of the Black Hand Gang of Boston."

The letter was posted in Boston yesterday. It was dated March 12 and typewritten. It read:

BLACK HAND THREAT.

"I am leaving for New York this morning and will be at the opening of court tomorrow morning. I am chief of the black hand band that has defied the police all over the world. I need not make any signs or drawings to show what this means, and what will happen to you if Harry K. Thaw is convicted. Harry K. Thaw is sane and must be set at liberty."

Kennedy, although he believes the letter a hoax, turned it over to Captain Lanyon, a detective for the Attorney-General's office. The Boston police were also notified.

Mrs. Thaw and Mrs. Carnegie,

TURKS PREPARE FINAL STAND ON ISLES NEAR CONSTANTINOPLE

LONDON, March 13.—Turkey's final stand against the Anglo-French fleet, which is now hammering away at the Dardanelles forts, will be made upon Princess Islands, in the Sea of Marmora, ten miles south of Constantinople. Dispatches from Dedeagatch, Bulgaria, say that the Turkish government is expelling all the inhabitants from Princess Islands, and is moving many big guns from the Tchaija fortress to the islands, where they are being mounted to dispute the passage of the fleet.

If the international fleet is able to force a passage through the Dardanelles and the Sea of Marmora, it will have to silence the guns upon Princess Islands before its task is complete.

CARDEN SETS EASTER SUNDAY.

An Athens dispatch to the Paris Journal says Vice-Admiral Carden, commander of the Anglo-French fleet, has stated that he expects to steam through the Dardanelles by Easter Sunday. He bases this upon the operations of the warships alone without counting upon the aid of land forces. There were seventy boats in the fleet of mine sweepers that was at work in the Dardanelles on Thursday.

Under the direction of the Germans the gunfire of the Turks is getting better, but many of the shells are of inferior quality failing to explode when they strike.

An Athens dispatch says that Fort Chimikli is the only important Turkish fort on the Dardanelles still holding out, but that there are many hidden batteries which remain in action. The dispatch adds that dragging for mines continues and that only two mine fields remain intact as far as known to the officers of the fleet.

Dispatches from Athens state that three British warships bombarded the Turkish forts of Kalid Bahr and Chimikli' in the Dardanelles last night, according to news from the Dardanelles sphere of operations. The bombardment was resumed after a brief lull at sunset, the dispatch adds.

TURKISH GUNNERY IMPROVES.

On Thursday ships of the Anglo-French fleet bombarded the Turkish forts, but did not enter the narrows of the Dardanelles, apparently endeavoring to prevent the Turks by long-distance fire from repairing certain works that had been damaged. The Turkish artillery fire is improving, owing to the arrival of trained German artillerymen.

An all-day bombardment of the Turkish batteries defending the narrows of the Dardanelles was in progress Friday, it is stated in dispatches from Athens. At the same time six warships bombarded the Turkish forts at Smyrna with satisfactory results, but the Turkish fire, directed by trained German gunners, proved extremely accurate and the battleship Triumph was struck a number of times.

Six more warships have joined the international fleet, and it was these that bombarded Smyrna. Even before these naval reinforcements arrived the armada was the greatest and most powerful ever drawn together.

A steady rain of shells was directed shoreward by the ships in the Dardanelles throughout Friday, the cannonade being kept up until darkness fell. Most of the projectiles were hurled against the batteries upon the Asiatic side. A bridge near Dandan was destroyed and the ships were able to advance as far as Karantina.

DENY TURKISH CLAIMS.

Official claims of the Turkish War Office that several mine sweepers and a transport attached to the international fleet had been sunk by Turkish guns were denied here. It was stated in Admiralty circles that the damage inflicted by Turkish guns could be considered trivial when compared with the magnitude of the success accomplished so far by the fleet.

Many shells fell in the city proper, while the warships were bombarding Smyrna on Friday, and it is reported from Tenedas that thousands of Turks, including many refugees who had made the city their haven at the outbreak of the war, are fleeing.

The Triumph's damage sustained in the duel between the squadron and the Smyrna fort is said to be light. This is a 11,985-ton ship carrying 10-inch guns. She is commanded by Captain Maurice Fitzmaurice.

Athens reports that the assaults upon the Dardanelles fortes have not advanced sufficiently to allow land operations upon a big scale. It is believed here that transports will be diverted to Smyrna and that a strong force of soldiers and marines will be landed there as soon as the war fleet can reduce the forts defending the city.

It is believed that a heavy contingent of Indian troops is on the way to reinforce the English and French forces now operating in the Turkish sphere.

TURKS CLAIM VICTORIES.

The Turkish claims as contained in dispatches from Constantinople claim defeat of the Anglo-French fleet in the Dardanelles and the sinking of three mine sweepers and a transport belonging to the allies. The Turkish statement purports to be a review of the operations of the Anglo-French and Russian fleets on March 7, 9 and 10. It follows:

"On March 7 the Russian fleet bombarded the harbors of Kilimli, Sanguldak, Koslu and Bremli. The Turkish fire in reply was well directed and struck a torpedo boat. The enemy withdrew after their shells had fired fifty old wooden houses. At Bremli the Russians sank several ships. Several persons were injured by the bombardment.

"On March 9 three of the enemy's armored cruisers unsuccessfully bombarded our infantry and the fortifications at Fort Sed-El-Bahr. Minesweepers of the enemy which attempted to approach the line of mines under cover of a mist were driven off by our batteries.

"On the night of March 10 the enemy tried, under cover of cruisers and destroyers, to clear the outer mine fields after larger ships had unsuccessfully bombarded the searchlights installed by us. The fortresses sank three mine-sweepers. The enemy was forced to withdraw.

"On the night of the 10th a transport of the enemy was sunk off Mitylene."

BANDIT TELLS OF PRIEST'S SLAYING

WILLINGTON, Del., March 13.—Bernard Montvid, who confessed to the slaying of the Rev. Joseph Zebris, priest o fthe Lithuanian church at New Britain, Ct., and his housekeeper, on February 8, according to Chief of Police Black and New Britain detectives, will be taken to Connecticut to be arraigned. The prisoner and a companion, Peter Krakas, are in the workhouse here in connection with the slaying of a policeman last Saturday.

Delaware authorities intend to hold Krakas for the death of Policeman Tierney.

Montvid said, according to the police, that he did not actually kill the victims, but he was present when the slaying was done. He said Peter Krakas was the principal in the tragedy. Montvid said that he selected the date and arranged for the meeting of the men implicated, and when they met at the appointed place all went together to the house, and he alleges he saw the people slain.

The prisoner did not tell how it was actually done, but he made a complete confession, which was written out and signed, according to the police. The officers refused to make the confession public at this time.

FIND CAMBRIDGE GIRL DIED FOLLOWING OVERDOSE OF DRUG

William T. McCarthy. Frank McDermott, who was counsel for Peter Delorey in the Annie Mullins case, was on hand for the prisoners.

There was some discussion. Then Chief Inspector Patrick J. Hurley was called on the telephone. Mr. McCarthy talked wit bthe chief inspector.

Then it was decided to make the complaint manslaughter. The prisoners were first arrested on murder charges.

The manslaughter complaint was issued by Clerk Forbes and, on this document, the police brought their prisoners before the court.

Counsel McDermott waived the reading of the complaint and entered pleas of not guilty for Le Hand and St. Pierre. He told Judge Almy that Chief Inspector Hurley had suggested, in his telephone talk, that the bail might be $2,500 each, as it was felt that neither defendant would try to leave the city, also that some time would elapse before Professor Whitney's report on his analysis of the dead girl's stomach would be received and the defendants would like to furnish bail if the figure was not too high. Judge Almy fixed the bail at $2,500 and the continuance was ordered.

MISS McKENNA'S STORY.

Earlier in the day Miss Cecelia A. McKenna went from her lodgings at No. 701 Tremont street to Cambridge police headquarters and related her story of the events leading up to the death of Miss Ryan.

Miss McKenna is twenty-one years old, the same age as her unfortunate companion. Her story to the police corroborated the explanations given by LeHand and McKenna as to the two young men meeting the two girls late Thursday night in a Boston cafe and then taking them to Cambridge.

But Miss McKenna did not remember anything about Miss Ryan "helping herself to some heroin" in St. Pierre's drugstore, which the two men declared to the police.

Miss McKenna told the police that she had known Esther Ryan since last Summer, when they met on their vacations. Miss Ryan then worked in the Cambridge candy store of William J. Hennessy.

Thursday night, Miss McKenna said, she and Miss Ryan were in a Boston cafe. They were just leaving when they met LeHand and St. Pierre.

MIND WAS HAZY.

According to Miss McKenna's story to the police the girl accepted an invitation to drop into another cafe. Later they took a car to North Cambridge.

The party got off the car at Russell street, in North Cambridge, where St. Pierre is part owner of the Russell pharmacy, and where St. Pierre had promised that they could get more refreshments if they wanted any.

They did have refreshments, the McKenna girl told the police. Finally the Ryan girl and Le Hand left the store. She said she herself left soon afterward. She admitted to Captain Hurley of the Cambridge police that her recollection of the evening was hazy. She said she could recall nothing that could have been construed into the Ryan girl's reaching for a bottle of heroin.

After leaving the drug store she said that she had taken a car which landed her in Arlington Centre. There she got out and telephoned to Boston for a taxicab to take her home. When the taxi arrived she did not enter it. Her reason, she said, was that she did not know the driver.

She finally took the car leaving Harvard Square for Adams Square at 3 o'clock, but left it at Central Square, Cambridge. How she finally arrived in her room, or at just what time she did not know. She was still asleep in bed when Inspector Coady of the Cambridge police, found her.

She told the police that her chum had never been addicted to the use of drugs. She herself had never used drugs. From what she knew of the Ryan girl, she did not believe that she would voluntarily take drugs.

TWO MEN QUESTIONED.

Miss McKenna, who was the key to the mystery of the identity of the girl whom the police picked up unconscious in Milton street, North Cambridge, early yesterday morning, was traced through the cafe at which the party had last stopped in Boston.

While inspectors were trailing her, as the "Alice" who had been in the party, they were subjecting Le Hand and St. Pierre to a grilling questioning.

Dr. F. J. O'Rourke of Hollis street telephoned the police early yesterday morning to send an ambulance to Milton street, where he had found a woman unconscious. When the police arrived they found the doctor, the unconscious girl and Le Hand. Le Hand's original story was that he had been on his way home to No. 101 Orchard street, and found the girl "leaning against the fence, unconscious." Then he telephoned to Dr. O'Rourke.

The police did not accept Le Hand's story. The Cambridge telephone office furnished the information that Dr. O'Rourke's call had come from the Russell pharmacy. The police wanted to know how Le Hand got into the drug store after it had been closed for hours. He told them he had awakened St. Pierre's brother, Joseph, when he found the drug store closed, and the brother opened the store to telephone for him.

This admission led to the further admission that he and St. Pierre had spent the evening together. Then St. Pierre, who is married and has two children, was brought into the station. The two men finally said that they had been with the unidentified girl in the evening. They knew her as "Esther" and her chum as "Alice."

SAID GIRL TOOK DRUG.

After leaving a Washington street cafe, they said, they had come to a drug store. While there "Esther" had helped herself to a bottle of heroin, they said. Then Le Hand and "Esther" went out, leaving St. Pierre and "Alice" in the store.

Le Hand declared that they walked down the street. When the girl he was with became faint, he ran back to the drug store for St. Pierre. He found the store closed. Then he awakened Joseph St. Pierre, who opened the store and telephoned to Dr. O'Rourke.

While the police were securing statements from the men, the girl died at the Cambridge Hospital, without regaining consciousness.

Medical Examiner Swan performed an autopsy, establishing the fact that the girl's death was preceded by no direct violence, and that there existed no organic disease that would have caused death. His examination did show that death was caused by asphyxia, but did not definitely establish the cause of the asphyxia. This will be determined by Professor Whitney of Harvard, to whom the organs have been sent for analysis.

GIRL CAME FROM WARE.

The Ryan girl was an attractive blonde. She was born in Ware and attended the schools there. Her father is employed in Saxonville. Most of her life the girl lived in Watertown and Cambridge, since the death of her mother, seven years ago.

She first lived with her grandmother and aunts, whose home is now in Everett, at No. 111 Walnut street. She left there and went to live with the family of Elwin Jacobs, in Mt. Auburn, later in Watertown and finally in River street, Cambridge. She has not been with that family for the last four months, however. She was last staying in Orchard street, Cambridge.

EITEL ACTION WAITS WHILE GERMAN WARSHIPS STILL RAID

statement in Mr. Lansing's office on the sinking of the Frye. He brought with him to Washington affidavits by members of his crew concerning the affair.

It was the belief in administration circles that President Wilson would take time carefully to go over the facts developed by his investigators. No diplomatic steps will be taken, it was said, until this has been done and the chief executive has the full case before him.

Meanwhile the probable attitude of Germany in the matter is giving the diplomats here a topic for discussion. They have reached the conclusion in advance of any official information on the subject that Germany promptly will make amends for the action of the captain of the Prinz Eitel, and it is not believed that the case will present any complications. This belief has been strengthened by advices from Berlin stating that the sinking of the Frye as viewed there was unwarranted and as the act of an excited captain.

The administration still kept down the lid on the report as to the time needed for repairs to the Prinz Eitel, and it was intimated that no announcement of this would be made officially. This course was followed in the case of the German gunboat Geier at Honolulu.

It is argued that to announce the exact time would aid the warships waiting outside the Capes and deprive the Eitel Friedrich of a fair chance to escape.

The belief in administration circles still prevailed, however, that the raider would be interned.

DESERTERS FROM FRYE TO PRINZ EITEL GIVE RISE TO COMPLICATIONS

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., March 13.—Fresh complications in the case of the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich, which make necessary an official decision in Washington, have arisen. This became known today when it was learned that former members of the crew of the destroyed American bark William P. Frye are in the ship's company of the auxiliary cruiser.

These two men are Charles Frank and Robert Bogge, both of whom are said to be Germans. They were given an opportunity to enlist in the ship's crew and did so.

A report of this complication has been made to the State Department at Washington. A decision is expected very soon as to whether or not demand shall be made for the surrender of the two seamen in question.

Discovery of the fact that two seamen of the William P. Frye had joined the Prinz Eitel Friedrich was made by Customs Collector Hamilton, who examined members of the crew of that vessel to ascertain the details of her destruction by the German warship.

When it was found that Frank and Bogge had not come ashore with the other sailors of the William P. Frye, Captain H. H. Kiehne, master of the bark, expressed the opinion that the men had remained behind on the German ship of their own volition.

The Prinz Eitel Friedrich was scheduled to come out of drydock during the day, after which repairs upon her machinery will be made.

An agent of the French line has arrived here to take charge of the eighty Turks and other foreigners who had been passengers upon the steamship Floride when she was sunk by the German warship. They will be sent to Buenos Ayres, their original destination, from New York.

SUBMARINE SINKS WARSHIP WITH 190 OF CREW IN 5 MINUTES

LONDON, March 13.—Dispatches received here today fixed the loss of life at 190 souls when the British auxiliary cruiser Bayano was destroyed, presumably by a torpedo rfom a German submarine, in the Irish Sea. Survivors of the Bayano, who were landed at Ayr, Scotland, reported that the vessel sank in three minutes, and that no warning had been given her.

Although the Bayona was sunk on Thursday morning while doing patrol duty, it was not until last night that the Admiralty announced the fact, and it was not until today that the details of the disaster were finally given. Survivors at Ayr told the following story:

Just before daybreak about 5 o'clock in the morning the ship was shaken from stem to stern by a severe explosion. She immediately began to go down, bow first, and Captain Carr gave orders for every man to save himself.

Although the ship settled within three minutes and there was no time to lower the ten boats, there was no panic on board.

CAPTAIN COOLEST MAN.

The coolest man of all was the captain. He mounted the bridge and was at his post when the auxiliary cruiser took her final plunge.

One young seaman upon showing evidences of fright was encouraged by Captain Carr, who slapped the youth upon the back, meanwhile saying:

"My good lad, save yourself; don't be afraid!"

Some of the men leaped into the water and others were thrown into the sea when the ship gave a pitch and disappeared beneath the surface.

The survivors were in the icy water for four hours and all were suffering severely when picked up by the Belfast steamer Balmerino and by another small steamer which stood by.

The Bayano carried a crew of 216 men and only twenty-six are known to have been rescued, eighteen of these being picked up by the Balmerino. The Bayano was attacked off Corsewall Point. She was a steamship of 5,948 tons and hailed from Portsmouth. She was taken over by the government shortly after the outbreak of the war and fitted out as an auxiliary cruiser.

Most of the crew were in their berths when the explosion occurred. Lifeboats and rafts were smashed to pieces. A great column of water was blown into the air to a height of more than 100 yards.

WALKED INTO SEA.

One of those rescued says he sprang from his bunk and only had time to pull on his trousers. As he reached the deck, he literally walked into the sea.

A few men got into one boat, but it capsized and all but one were drowned.

The survivors state that but for the fact that they had camel vests and pneumatic collars they could not have kept afloat until a raft was sighted.

All around the sea was strewn with wreckage, among which the men swam and to which they clung until benumbed. One after another they slipped down into the depths.

About 8 o'clock they sighted a large vessel at a distance, but the latter failed to notice the raft, and passed on its way.

The captain of the reserve ship Balmerino, in an interview with the Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Belfast, said the collier was on a voyage from Belfast to Ayr when at 8:30 o'clock Thursday morning, four miles from Black Head, he saw a low-lying object in the water.

His first impression was that it was a submarine, but he did not alter his course until a closer inspection, when a cluster of men were observed making signs with garments attached to an oar.

When the collier got closer the crew of the Balmerino found two rafts and a ship's boat upturned with twenty-six men on one of them.

"Two of the men," said the captain, "had no other clothing than shirts, and others only their sleeping garments. One had an ugly wound on his head and was covered with blood, while nearly all of them were bruised and bleeding.

"They were more dead than alive from wet, cold and exposure, but cheered us as we neared them. Boats were promptly lowered and the men transferred."

The captain said that two of the rescued men were so far gone that in another half hour, he believed, they would have perished. Eighteen of the men on the raft, including two doctors, were removed to the Balmarino.

After these were safely got aboard, a boat was making a second journey to the raft when the armed merchantman Tara arrived on the scene and took off the remaining survivors.

"They said the Bayano sank within a few minutes after being torpedoed," said the Balmarino's captain. "There was a terrific explosion and the vessel went down by the bow. The explosion created a great amount of damage and some of the lifeboats were smashed and rendered useless.

BRITISH ATTACK GERMAN POSITIONS BEYOND CHAPELLE

HARRY K. THAW FOUND NOT GUILTY

Thaw's mother and sister, came to court early and then went to the sheriff's office to talk with the defendant.

TAKES ACQUITTAL COOLLY.

Thaw took his acquittal very calmly. He did not smile nor glance toward his anxious mother and sister. While Deputy Attorney-General Cook was asking Justice Page to hand Thaw over to the Matteawan guards who were waiting, Thaw did not appear the least nervous.

When he was remanded to the Tombs until Monday he turned at once and preceded his guard toward the sheriff's office, where he was allowed to see his mother.

Thaw's motion to be returned to New Hampshire is based upon the expressed ruling of the United States Supreme Court that he could be extradited to New York only to answer a criminal charge.

The demeanor of the co-defendants, Butler, Thompson, Duffy and Flood, was in great contrast to that of Thaw. When they heard the verdict they smiled broadly, and when they were discharged they almost ran from the room laughing as they went.

PREDICTS THAW'S FREEDOM.

Outside, they were received by a crowd of jubilant friends, who escorted them from the building. The belief was expressed by Morgan J. O'Brien, Jr., of Thaw's counsel, that the famous prisoner is now on the road to freedom, outside New York State. He said the defence believed Justice Page could not but grant the motion to return Thaw to New Hampshire in view of the ruling of the United States Supreme Court.

He pointed out that New York has failed to hold Thaw on the conspiracy charge and under the order of the Supreme Court cannot get possession of Thaw on any other ground because the highest court held Thaw could not be extradited because of insanity.

Captain Lanyon was held for contempt of court by Justice Page as the result of a fist fight he had with Sheriff Max S. Grifenhagen. The fight started when the jury went back to consider its verdict. It occurred because of a difference of opinion in the case as to the right of Lanyon to be inside the rail.

RUSSIA ADMITS GERMAN GAIN

PETROGRAD, March 13.—Fierce attacks by General von Hindenburg troops west of the Niemen river have compelled the Russians to retire slightly along the front and assume the defensive, it was officially admitted at the War Office today.

Grand Duke Nicholas' forces have withdrawn only to their prepared positions, according to the War Office and the German claims that they are retreating to Grodno are denied.

The Russian withdrawal was due to the sudden appearance at Augustowo of heavy German reinforcements. Apprised of their approach by his areoplane scouts, the Russian commander fell back from positions that would have been insecure in the face of the numerical superiority of the Germans.

The battle along the front from Prasnysz to the Narew and B Rivers is still raging without decisive result.

The minor successes of the Germans in Poland is more than offset by the gains of the Russians in Galicia, according to the Petrograd military authorities. The towns of Lupkow and Smolnik, from which the Russians retired three weeks ago have been recaptured. Four thousand Austrian prisoners were taken in this fighting, and dispatches from Lemberg state that the Russians killed or wounded twice that number.

The official army messenger, while admitting the strength of the German attacks in Poland, asserts that there is no reason for anxiety as to the ultimate success of the Russians.

"Each collision on the battle front in North Poland," says the official report, "leaves the Russians more confident of the superiority of her soldiers over the new German a The rough punishment inflicted von Hindenburg's corps of you conscripts since they left their own frontier has convinced him of the necessity of distributing the broken regiments among his seasoned troops.

"Both these German attacks are being conducted in great numbers collected from columns which abandoned other lines of offence. They are meeting determined Russian resistance and their progress has been definitely checked."

Offers Italy Trent if Germans Triumph

'Wife' May Hale Mayo to Scranton ◆ Hint of an Attempt at Extradition

New Haven Wife Identified as New Jersey Girl by Her Father

NEW HAVEN, March 13.—Virginius J. Mayo, whose entanglements with six women were revealed by the suicide of Lillian May Cook, his stenographer, today refused to comment on a report from Scranton, Pa., that his extradition to Pennsylvania may be sought on the charge he deserted Mrs. Florence Weeks Mayo.

A report from Scranton quotes District Attorney Maxey as saying:

"If Mrs. Mayo presents proof of her claim, I shall have a warrant sworn out against Mayo. The only charge she can press, it seems to me, is for abandonment and non-support. The bigamy statute of limitations in Pennsylvania is two years, so Mrs. Mayo could not possibly prosecute, even if she had proof that Mayo had a wife living at the time of this marriage.

"The next step would be to arraign the offender in quarter sessions. The Court could hear the case and dictate financial provisions. If the defendant refused or was unable to obey the decision of the court he would be in contempt and could be committed to jail.

MRS. F. W. MAYO ILL.

Mrs. Florence Weeks Mayo is reported today to be critically ill.

It developed today that the Mrs. Mayo living in New Haven is the daughter of William C. Meyers of West Caldwell, N. J. Mrs. Mayo's father, although he cleared up the question of his daughter's identity, still leaves a cloud hanging over the history which has elapsed in his daughter's life since her wedding to Mayo—for father and daughter separated when the marriage was performed.

"Of course, she is my daughter," he said, "and she has been his dupe ever since they were married. It was while she was living with her grandmother in Newark that the wedding took place. Mayo knew she had received from her grandmother a gift of $3,300 and this acted as a magnet to draw him toward her.

A coincidence was revealed when it was learned that Susie Wahlers, the New Haven stenographer who claims Mayo is the father of her child, formerly lived near Scranton. The home of her parents was at Dunmore, a suburb of Scranton.

Frederick C. Wahlers, a musician, a cousin of Susan Wahlers, said today:

SCRANTON COINCIDENCE.

"Herman Wahlers is a brother of my late father, August Wahlers. He lived with his family at Prospect avenue and Grove street, Dunmore. About nineteen years ago the family moved to New Haven, where my uncle had work as a painter. There were in the family, besides Herman Wahlers and his wife, three children, Herman and Emil Wahlers, and the daughter Susie, who was about eight years old when the family moved away.

"Susan, of course, did not know Mayo. She was only a child. In course of time she finished a course in the New Haven High School and became a stenographer. She was employed by Mayo in his radiator factory."

The town hall and other buildings were saved by two automobile fire engines which came 17 miles from New London and drenched the buildings with water. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

RABIES KILLS BOY; TO ROUND UP DOGS

With the death of one Peabody boy from hydrophobia, and with another child suffering from a bite from the same dog, Agent James P. Sullivan of the Peabody Board of Health, has ordered Peabody residents to restrain their dogs for thirty days, and a ten dollar reward is offered for the capture of the dog responsible for the boy's death.

The dead boy was John Smyrnos, aged six, of No. 4 English street. Another boy, eight, Chris Christopholopolos, is suffering from bites on his head and chin. Smyrnos was bitten over the eye. The dog, a black and white Boston terrier, attacked the two boys at the corner of Upton and Wallis streets, Peabody, on February 20.

Spiros Smyrnos, father of the dead boy, said:

"The night the two boys were bit we took them to the Town Hall and Dr. John Shanahan, the town physician, cauterized their wounds. I hunted for the dog and found one that looked as my boy described. The dog snapped and tore at my trousers. I took him to the police, but they said they didn't want him. So I let the dog go.

"My boy was all right till Wednesday. Then he began to complain that his head hurt, and he had hallucinations. I called Dr. Charles Tucker and Dr. Manoogian, and they ordered the boy to the Thomas Hospital, where he died."

The police deny they liberated a dog brought to them by Smyrnos.

WITTE, RUSSIA'S STATESMAN, DEAD

PETROGRAD, March 13.—Count Sergius Witte, Russia's greatest statesman, is dead at the age of sixty-six. The Count has been in failing health for several months, and for several weeks before his death was in Southern Russia.

Count Witte was born at Tiflis in June, 1849, son of a director of the department of agriculture in the Caucasus. He was the descendant of a Dutch family that emigrated to Russia.

After receiving an education at Kishineff at the university of Odessa he entered the Russian railway service. His rise in the government service was rapid.

The Count in 1892 became Minister of Communications and a few months later Minister of Finance. In 18 he was appointed Minister of State to the Emperor and Privy Councillor in 1899. Four years later he again became Minister of Finance and in 1905 was chiefly responsible for the treaty of Portsmouth, which ended the Russo-Japanese war. He formed the first Russian Ministry and served as its president.

In 1906 he retired from active public life, though his influence had been marked in many circles since that time. Though his greatest fame was won in the field of statesmanship, he was also a noted scientist.

HUNT TWO GANGS OF STORE RAIDERS

Two more gangs of armed robbers, who raided two stores, imprisoning the clerks and looting safes and cash registers, are being sought by the police today.

The two most recent raids occurred at Atlantic avenue and Congress street and at No. 109 Blue Hill avenue. The two clerks in Thiel's Wine Cellar in Atlantic avenue were backed into the cellar and lashed to a hot furnace pipe. The proprietor of the Blue Hill avenue provision store was given the opposite extreme by being imprisoned in his refrigerator.

The police scored one to the raiders' two by arresting two South Boston youths on the charge of holding up the liquor store of Guy Amrhein, No. 88 West Broadway, March 10. The South Boston suspects are James E. Noonan, eighteen, of East Second street, and John Coakley, twenty-one, of Pulaski street.

Noonan and Coakley were held in $1,000 each for the grand jury, and they, with Francis T. Chambers, twenty-two, of No. 523 East Second street, were held in $1,000 each on a charge of robbing Joseph H. Miley of $30 outside his Dorchester street liquor store.

The Atlantic avenue raid was made by two men. That in Roxbury was made by four. Two men walked into Thiel's and one asked Otto M. Pell, a clerk, for a bottle of brandy. The other walked over to the other clerk, Patrick A. McCartin. Soon they found themselves staring at two revolvers.

Pell opened the safe for the men. There was nothing in it, however. The cash register yielded $73.84. Then the two clerks were lashed to a furnace pipe. Pell finally wore through his bonds, just as he was exhausted from the heat. He rescued McCartin, who was in even worse state. The robbers they described as about twenty-eight years old, with light complexions, wearing dark clothing and overcoats.

The four raiders in Roxbury walked into Peter Harroutin's provision store, revolvers already drawn. Harroutin, who had been held up once before since he opened his store six months ago, but had wrested the revolver from the hold-up man, was just coming out of the refrigerator. When he saw four automatics all headed his way, he threw up his hands.

The men backed him into the refrigerator and locked the door, first emptying his pockets of $37. Another had already rifled the cash drawer of $28. Harroutin was about fifteen minutes in the refrigerator before he attracted attention of a man in the next store.

Harvard Overseers to Meet May 10-11

May 10 and 11 have been selected as dates for the annual two days' meeting of the Harvard Board of Overseers. It is likely that the same days will also be designated as "visiting days" for the alumni who wish to return to Cambridge and "see the wheels of the University activity go round."

Judges Are Umpires for People, Taft Says

HANOVER, N. H., March 13.—"Our judges are really the umpires in the game of government, and on them rests the obligation to declare all fouls, whether made by the majority or the minority," declared ex-President Taft in speaking before Dartmouth College students. "The judges, although appointed by the majority, must bear in mind the interests of the minority, and to that end are removed as far as possible from the influence of either."

DELAY FUNERAL OF MRS. ROCKEF'LLER

NEW YORK, March 13.—John D. Rockefeller and his son, John D., Jr., are hurrying to this city on a special train from Ormonde, Fla., where they were notified of the death of Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, at the home of the oil magnate at Pocantico. Rockefeller and his son are expected here late this afternoon, and arrangements have been made for their quick transfer to Tarrytown.

The elder Rockefeller is said to be sadly shaken by the shock of his wife's death, but is bearing his grief with quiet fortitude.

Funeral arrangements await the arrival of the husband and son, and other members of the family. The burial will be at Cleveland, O., it is said. Funeral services at Pocantico will probably be held tomorrow.

Mrs. E. Parmalee Prentice, one of Mrs. Rockefeller's two daughters, was summoned from New York, but failed to arrive before her mother's death. The other daughter, Mrs. Harold Fowler McCormick of Chicago, is in Switzerland recuperating from an illness. Her husband was to sail tomorrow to join her, but cancelled his passage and came here at once.

Word has been received from William Rockefeller, who is at his Winter home on Jekyl Island, that his physician has forbidden him to attend the funeral of his brother's wife.

Mr. Rockefeller, according to his secretary, is suffering from a severe cold, and his physician feared the effects of a colder climate.

While Mrs. Rockefeller has been an invalid for more than a year, her death was sudden and unexpected. Her general improvement was so marked that her husband and son ventured South, and the only member of the family at the deathbed was her sister, Miss Lucy M. Spellman.

HERE ARE SOME OF THE REASONS

GENERAL VON BERNHARDI

In first article written by the famous German military authority since the start of great war explains his country's attitude.

"England has attacked us in a most unjustifiable fashion for the purpose of checking our political and economical development."

PROFESSOR GUGLIELMO FERRERO

COPYRIGHT BY BAIN.

The noted historian, from the camp of the Allies writes:

"All Europe will be an armed camp if Germany wins."

Both of these articles will be very interesting, as both sides of the mighty conflict will be ably discussed by men whose opinions carry great weight.

Julian Hawthorne's Study of Rudolph & Maranville of the Braves

Julian Hawthorne's contributions to the Sunday American, from the Stallings camp at Macon, have been the literary sensation of the Spring training season. Hawthorne has made baseball interesting to the literary elite, literature appealing to dyed-in-the-wool fans.

Having the journalistic instinct, Mr. Hawthorne succeeded the other day in inducing Dick and the Rabbit to pose for him alongside some figures of the athletes of Ancient Greece. SEE the pictures and READ the Hawthorne summing up, exclusively in the Sunday American.

FASHIONABLE SOCIETY REBUKED

Rev. "Billy" Sunday Says:

"There are slaves of fashion, women who are chained to the Moloch of pride and vanity, all noble longings and ambitions of motherhood dead. There are women to whom the touch of baby fingers carries no thrill of sanctity; they have sold all those most sacred emotions for the emotions of society, the whirl of the licentious tango."

"Mother" Jones Says:

"The high ideals of womanhood can never be realized in Colony Clubs. The canker worm that is gnawing at the vitals of our womanhood is the failure of the rich woman to fulfill her mission in life."

TELLS OF AUTO RIDES BY CABOT

George E. Cabot, nephew of the late millionaire-sportsman, Louis Cabot, and a prominent figure in the contest now being waged over the latter's $2,000,000 will before Judge Hardy and a Norfolk County jury, is expected to retake the witness stand when the trial starts on its fifth consecutive week Monday morning.

For one hour George Cabot was excused from the stand while Guy F. Fairfield, an automobile dealer of Keene, N. H., testified. With the completion of Fairfield's testimony Cabot's re-direct examination was begun by Attorney Sherman L. Whipple, chief counsel for Mrs. L. Vernon Briggs, youngest daughter of the deceased and contestant of the will. It is expected his examination will be completed by Monday noon.

Questioned by Attorney Whipple, Fairfield testified that he first met the late Louis Cabot in the Spring of 1910. Thereafter, he met the millionaire annually until 1913. During those three years witness said he took Louis Cabot and a party of the latter's friends on some forty automobile trips.

Defence in Trial of Mrs. Angle May Begin on Monday

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., March 13.—When the trial of Mrs. Helen M. Angle for alleged manslaughter in the death of Waldo R. Ballou is resumed on Monday it is expected the State will conclude that day and the defence will begin.

Mrs. Seraphina Klahre, police matron in Stamford, was the last witness of the day. She had been sent to the Rippowam building at the time of Mrs. Angle's arrest. On the way to the police station Mrs. Angle told her, the witness said, there had been no quarrel between herself and Ballou that night.

Mrs. Louis Comstock Sings 'Annie Laurie' Across U. S. by Phone

NEW YORK, March 13.—The executives of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company were the hosts, and their wives and friends were the guests, at the first transcontinental reception ever held by telephone.

The more than sixty women who were present in the offices of the Bell system here, conversed across the continent with telephone men in the company's building on the grounds of the Panama-Pacific exposition.

An unusual feature of the affair was the singing of "Annie Laurie" across the continent by Mrs. Louis N. Comstock. In 1884 she sang from New York to Boston over the first telephone line between these two cities.

Cadillac Display Attracts Throngs

There is no better arranged exhibit in the entire building than is that of the Cadillac. Located as it is on the stage in the Main Hall, a most conspicuous position, this display is being thoroughly and carefully inspected by the thousands of men and women who daily throng the aisles of Mechanics Building.

The Cadillac eight, the first of its kind to be placed on the American market, exemplifies the latest type of motor construction, and at the conclusion of this show will be added to the present long list of Cadillac owners the names of several prominent New England motorists.

Harvard Scored by Professor Meyer

LONDON, March 13.—Professor Edward Meyer, the historian, who lectured at Harvard University a few years ago, makes an onslaught on Harvard University in the "Vossiche Zeitung." It grows out of the refusal of Dr. Kuno Francke, who is lecturing at Harvard, to join a movement of Germans in the United States to restore that republic to true neutrality. Dr. Meyer says that Harvard University is taking a new and leading part in the anti-German agitation in the United States.

Ruth Pennock Seeks Lost Pink Negligee

Ruth Pennock, Radcliffe 1918, sister of Harvard's varsity football guard, advertises in the Radcliffe News asking for the return of articles she lost recently. Her advertisement reads:

"A pink negligee, two white and one pink crepe de chine skirts and a pink boudoir-cap have been lost. They were used in the Freshman Play and were in the Idler Room on Monday morning. If found please return to the Idler Room."

Pass Bill Amending New Haven Charter

HARTFORD, March 13.—A bill amending the charter of the New Haven Railroad to permit the company to sell or pledge shares of capital stock of the Old Colony and the Boston & Providence railroad companies, held in its treasury, has been passed by the House in concurrence with the Senate. Upon approval by the Governor the charter amendment becomes effective.

Dumaine Gets $500 in Lost Love Suit

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 13.—The jury in the case of John B. Dumaine, Jr., vs. Lionel T. Hart, returned a verdict of $500 for the plaintiff, who claimed the alienation of his wife's affections by the defendant. Dumaine was employed by Hart as clerk. Hart was taken as a boarder into the Dumaine household and, it was charged, by undue influence, secured the affections of Mrs. Dumaine, finally causing the breaking up of the family.

AUTO SHOW ENDS ITS RUN TONIGHT

By J. C. KERRISON.

This, the last day of the motor show, will differ in no material manner from those that have gone before. The exhibits will remain intact until the closing bell at 10 p. m. sounds the death knell of the thirteenth annual motor show of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association, a show which in more ways than one eclipses all that have gone before.

The early hours today were as lively as have been the afternoons. There was an atmosphere of business, delightful to the various dealers. Many who have been dangling in mid-air, swinging from one car to another, seemed to have struck the critical point and are anxious to secure immediate deliveries of some particular car. Several sales were made before the official opening of the show and the purchasers, having taken their time to determine their selection, are now in a state of expectancy and beseeching the dealer to make immediate deliveries.

Immediate deliveries are not as easy as one might imagine and many who have refrained from ordering their car until the last moment will now find themselves forced to wait several weeks before they can enjoy the pleasure of riding in the car they have purchased.

A remarkable thing is the great increase of attendance over previous years. The interest in the motor show has been sustained to a remarkable degree.

Autocar Men Hold Conference Here

Taking advantage at this time of seeing the Boston show, the factory and branch officers of the Autocar Company, Ardmore, Pa., are holding a conference at the Boston branch of the company, Nos. 612-643 Beacon street.

"Our bookings of orders for the past three months have been 33 1-3 per cent ahead of the corresponding three months a year ago," said David S. Ludlum, president of the Autocar Company.

Besides Mr. Ludlum there are present at the Autocar conference: J. S. Clarke, vice-president; W. W. Norton, vice-president and production manager; S. C. Lewin, assistant secretary and treasurer; B. B. Bachmann, engineer, all of Ardmore, Pa., and the following direct branch managers, M. S. Bulkley, Los Angeles; K. B. Harwood, Chicago; W. T. Savoye, New York; R. P. Page, Boston; N. S. Pringle, Newark; F. L. Foster, Baltimore; P. S. Prouty, Philadelphia.

Semi-Convertible Car Fills Demand

The Judkins semi-convertible touring landaulet exhibited by the Peerless company in its booth at Mechanics Building attracted a great deal of attention and brought forth many favorable comments, not only from automobile users, but also from automobile car and body builders.

It can be used at all seasons of the year. When closed it has all of the advantages of the limousine or coupe type of body. Special design and construction permits the use of exceptionally large side windows, overcoming the former objection to landaulet type of body.

In less than a minute the closed body can be converted into practically an open body, with large glass front back of front seat to protect occupants of tonneau from wind and dust.

Walls Pleased by Business at Show

D. R. Walls of the Splitdorff Electrical Company, who has been in attendance at all the shows on the circuit, after an inspection of the Boston show pronounced it the finest ever. He said:

"Not only is your show well staged and full to overflowing with the best there is in American motor cars and accessories but it is from a business standpoint one of the best of the year. Our local manager, H. R. Curtis, has furnished us with every indication of increased business and future prosperity. We find that the interest in the Splitdorf-Apelco electric starting and lighting system for Ford cars has reached a tremendous height."

New Type of Motor on Chalmers Line

Something entirely new in American designing is being revealed in the Chalmers exhibit at the show. It is the Chalmers "Six-40," with new and distinctive Chalmers-Delage type high-speed valve-in-head motor. This car, which is being shown for the first time here, has attracted the attention of engineers and other motor-wise folk who had heard rumors that the Chalmers Company was building a smaller "six" model and were eager to see it.

This "Six-40" is the first car ever built by the Chalmers Company at less than $1,500. The contrast between this generous sized, amply powered modern automobile and the "old" model of six or seven years ago is a pretty good index of the progress which the motor car industry has made.

Stowe Greets Many Auto Racing Drivers

Clarence G. Stowe, who has made Monogram, oil famous, and who knows more racing drivers than any other one man in the industry, is holding receptions in the booth where he formerly had a space until last year, right over the edge of the balcony. Joe Dawson, Charley Basle and Joe Downey have been visitors there discussing racing events dating back to the meets on the famous Ormond Beach course.

Mr. Stowe has an exhibit combining past and present, showing types of the first Winton and the latest model, the old and new Oldsmobile and some others that give visitors an idea of what a great progress has been made in the industry.

2,000 BOWLERS FROM ALL
PARTS OF UNITED STATES TO ROLL IN TOURNEY HERE

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

ARENA BOYS HOPE TO TURN
TABLES IN SECOND CLASH
WITH ABERDEENS TONIGHT

2,000 BOWLERS IN BIG TOURNEY HERE

FOR the first time in the history of bowling, exponents of candle pin, duck pin, Boston pin and ten-pin will meet in the same tournament. This innovation will take place at the Atlantic Coast Bowling Association tournament, to be held in this city in May. It is expected that over 2,000 bowlers will participate in this contest, coming to Boston from as far West as Chicago and as far South as Virginia.

* * *

THE movement which will unite all these bowlers under one banner, was one that has been sadly needed in the eastern part of the country, and the Atlantic Coast Bowling Association is filling a long felt need.

* * *

THERE will be a host of candlepin bowlers from New England, candle pin being confined exclusively to that territory, while there will be the leading ten-pin bowlers from Philadelphia, New York and many points in New Jersey and from every leading city, and small one as well, in New York State.

* * *

THE duck pin feature of the tournament is already assured for the simple reason that the factions, North and South, have become united and have agreed upon one style of duck pin competition, thereby doing away with the troublesome features of the past caused through a diversity of rules and regulations.

* * *

AT the time the Atlantic Coast Bowling Association's first tournament was planned, it was thought it would be necessary to use two styles of duck pin events, but the various bowlers of New England and the South met half way on a common ground, and the users of the larger ball agreed to a smaller one, and the users of the small ball agreed to one a little larger than their style of play called for. At the coming tournament in May the duck pin class calls for a ball that shall not exceed 4¾ inches in diameter. The pin which will be used in the tournament is [illegible] ideally perfect for the 4¾-inch ball. It is slightly larger than the New England duck pin and slightly smaller than the so-called Baltimore duck.

* * *

MANAGER FRED HARTFORD of the Arch Street alleys will have to make arrangements to handle a big crowd, which will surely gather at his place on Monday evening, when the last half of the twenty-string match between "Bo" Hartford and Eddie Dion and Aspacker and Pagle of the Egleston Square alleys will be rolled. Hartford and Dion have a 21-pin lead as a result of the first ten strings rolled Thursday night at Egleston Square.

* * *

IT would be hard to find a keener fight than the one which is now taking place between the Queen Quality and Dorothy Dodd teams of Jamaica Plain, which are battling for the honors of the Plant shoe factory. Up to the present time they stand tie, 2 to 2, in a five-match game, and the final and deciding match is to be rolled Wednesday, March 17.

* * *

UNDER ordinary conditions it would be hard to dope out a winner, but the pace that has been set by the individuals of the Queen Quality team gives them the benefit of the doubt.

* * *

THE outcome of this match will be watched keenly by outside commercial teams and leagues, as the winning representative team of the factory will stand ready to meet all comers in any Greater Boston commercial league or individual commercial teams.

* * *

THE Old Timers are just rounding into form as the season is quickly drawing to a close. This was evidenced at the Arch Street alleys Thursday night, when Bob Joy put his boys on exhibition. Fred Williams rolled the high single of 128. Fitzgerald rolled 118 and Coburn and Foster split the maple for strings of 110. The following Old Timers took part in the rolling: Coleman, Philbrick, Finn, Fitzgerald, Frame, McConville, Barnes, Cox, Williams, Foster, Hardy, Creed, Ware, Wheeler, Freedman, McKearney, Potter, Pierce, Ford, Coburn, McCarthy, Wilder, Fenton, Young and Rogers.

Parker's Win Puts Him in Running

The third close and interesting game of the week in the Class A billiard championship at the Imperial room resulted in a victory for Maurice Parker over Fred Frizell, 300 to 284, after the pair had been tied at 284.

By his victory, Parker continues in the running for the championship, despite the fact that he has lost one game. He still has to meet William Page, the present leader in the tournament.

Grover Hayes Victor.

CHICOPEE, March 13.—Grover Hayes of Philadelphia shaded Shamus O'Brien of Albany, N. Y., in a twelve-round bout here. Young Oliver of Holyoke was knocked out by Sammy Waltz of Hartford.

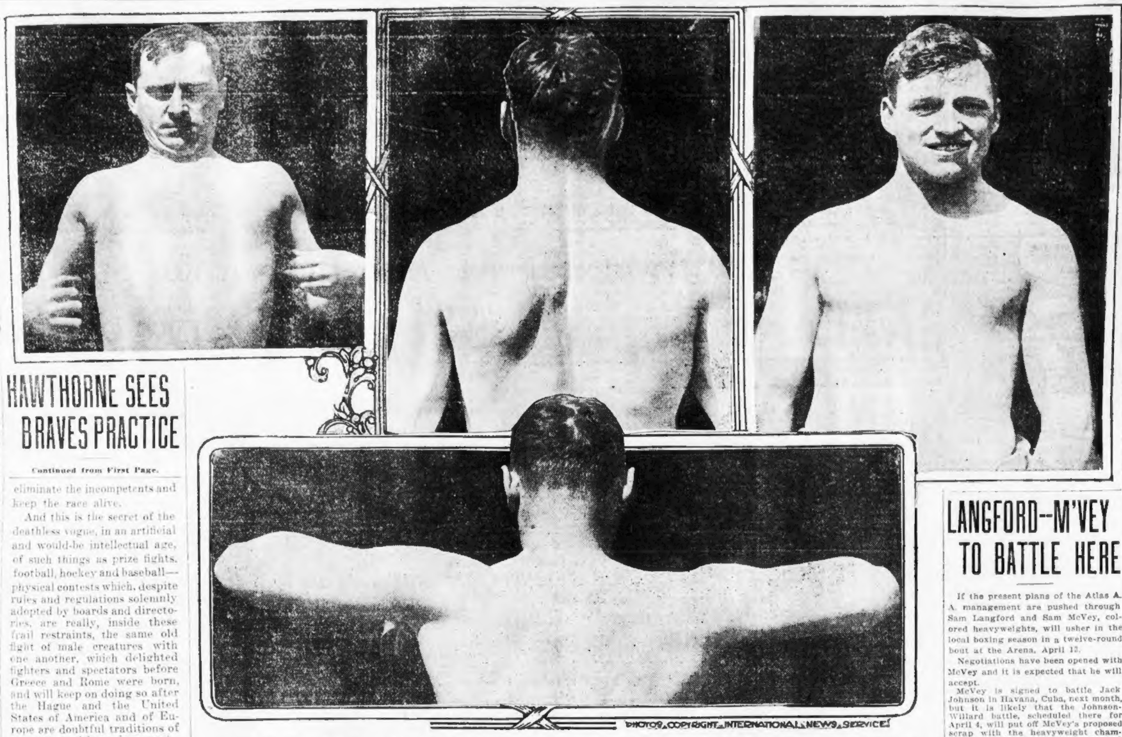
HOW TWO BRAVES ARE ROUNDING INTO FORM, SHOWN BY CAMERA



PHOTOS COPYRIGHT INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

HAWTHORNE SEES BRAVES PRACTICE

And this is the secret of the deathless vogue, in an artificial and would-be intellectual age, of such things as prize fights, football, hockey and baseball—physical contests which, despite rules and regulations solemnly adopted by boards and directories, are really, inside these frail restraints, the same old fight of male creatures with one another, which delighted fighters and spectators before Greece and Rome were born, and will keep on doing so after the Hague and the United States of America and of Europe are doubtful traditions of a remote and legendary past.

The rules and regulations, in fact, only render the conflict more acute and vehement, by compelling crude violence to become scientific and concentrated; the right-cross of the trained pugilist, landed on the vulnerable spot, is much more effective than the wasteful, slam-bang of the ignorant boor.

Three-old-cat is doubtless an ancient game, played between whiles by Ulysses and Achilles, with Ajax at the bat and Patrocius scouting; but those heroes would have blenched before the appalling delivery of our Boston Davis, and stood aghast at the swats of a Gowdy. Science, applied to war, inflames instead of diminishes savagery, just as a highly polished and slender sword blade is more deadly than the hardwood spears of the painted Britons in Caesar's Commentaries.

BRAVES TERRIBLE ON DIAMOND.

Whoever witnessed the four games of the World Series last season saw the last refinements of scientific warfare wonderfully amalgamated with tameless nature, each enhancing the other's virtue. The true aim of culture, and the test of it, is not to emasculate, but to virilise its subjects; and the Boston Braves, champions of the world in the world's most scientific and difficult form of conflict, are all the more terrible on the diamond because they are so urbane and discreet in the lobby.

The opening day's practice, however, was much more of a lark and a spree than a battle. No metes and bounds were observed, save by fits and starts and at the whim of a moment; balls flew here and there in a profligate manner, and the players recalled recess at school, where the object of the juvenile mob is to fling their arms and legs about as much as possible in the limited period. There was no bench, or none to sit on it; all were out and about, and whoever was not handling a club was hurling a ball.

Various also were the costumes; here the white uniform of the home circuit, there the dark blue of the travellers; yonder a red jersey, or a mere shirt and trousers. Shouts, guffaws, taunts and cat-calls; irresponsible base running, and Gowdy riding down the home-stretch on third base's back.

Everybody was out, everybody was in, and nobody minded. Here was a group juggling the ball from one to another; now a comedian strode to the plate and sent a ful spinning over the roof of the grand stand.

Amid the riot, now from one standpoint, now from another, stood erect and tall the dark figure of Manager Stallings, with folded arms, scrutinizing it all and missing nothing; to him, one presently realized it was not a promiscuous hurly-burly, but a review and a sizing up; he was estimating what each man measured after his Winter's loafing, and how much or how little licking into shape he would require before he was in fit form for the first game.

It was likewise his function, even in the apparent heedless confusion, to direct and moderate, to guard against the period of premature over-exertion, to avert sprains and bruises, to drop a hint here and a warning there, even as the hen admonishes her vagrant chicks. And the chicks, in their most abandoned excesses, felt the eye and heard the word. The Manager was the Manager, let the cave-men rage as they might.

This was in the morning; the first afternoon there was a slight foreshadowing of a game; and the next day the approximation was closer. It was then that the Sherwood Magee episode happened.

MAGEE, CONVERTED PHILLIE, THROWN.

This lusty youth had been one of the menacing elements in the Phillies last season; he had made telling swats at critical junctures, and had done other things more suitable to the Braves than to what one would wish their adversaries to be. Accordingly, George Stallings cast a spell over him; or at any rate we may suppose that he argued with his then proprietors after this fashion:

"Since we have proved that we can lick you anyway, you may as well make a clean thing of it, and make him over to us," and held out glittering compensations. Magee plainly belonged to the winning side wherever found; it were a pity to waste him among those doomed to efdeat; so to Boston he went, and Philadelphia consiled herself as best she might with the compensations.

And now, to illustrate once more the vanity of the plans of mice and men, here he was, at the very dawn and beginning of things, tumbling head over heels and tearing a ligament or wrenching a nerve in his right shoulder.

It was the result of no eccentric cavorting either, but in the strict line of duty—the capture of a difficult ball that might have been attempted at a pinch by Maranville; but with the converted Phillie charging in from outfield, mere courtesy would prompt the famous shortstop to forbear.

The ball was taken, but a tussock of grass in the wrong place perhaps, sprouting these many years unsuspected, fulfilled its malefic destiny, and all Boston groaned, dismayed, as their new comrade dazedly up-ended and came drooping to the bench. We had been congratulating ourselves on having a grass field for practice; but the proof of the pudding is in the eating.

The tumbled not only wrenched the boy's shoulder, but came near to breaking his heart; for his arm hung helpless. Imagine Daniel Webster, at the opening paragraph of his Reply to Hayne,s being stricken with aphasia. But it turned out that no bone was broken, and all may yet be well.

Magee is much too good to lose, not only in his place in the game, but as purveyor of jollity and good cheer at all times. He is the perfect build of the athlete, with a brain to match, and mental scenery constantly irradiated with sunshine.

SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

MACON, Ga., March 13.—The Braves certainly came through their first baseball series of the year with flying colors. It was a shame what we did to the Mercer College team, but as the collegians are mostly youngsters, they will probably recover from the effects of their collision with Stallings' steam roller.

* * *

We scored ten runs in our first game against Mercer, eleven in the second clash, while we tallied nineteen times in the final performance. It looked good to see the boys running around the bases in July form. If we played Mercer a couple of more times it would probably be impossible for the newspapermen to keep count of the runs scored by us.

* * *

One of the features of the Spring practice to date has been the fine hitting of "Red" Smith. The former Brooklyn player is certainly a demon with the bludgeon. He takes a healthy swing at the ball and when ash and horsehide meet, well, the poor old outfielders usually have to do some tall running. The boys have dubbed "Red" "Two-Base" Smith, as he has a happy faculty of smashing out doubles. The best feature of his hitting is that he usually comes across with a resounding wallop when a safe blow is most needed.

* * *

"Herb" Moran is another player who has shown very well in practice here. He has been playing right field and his work has been of the very best. There is but little need for me to tell the readers of the AMERICAN'S breezy sporting page that Moran is one of the fleetest base runners and fielders in the National League. Moran is not a .300 batter, but usually comes across with his wallops when a hit is most needed. He has been batting well this year and smashed out a triple and a single in yesterday's contest with Mercer. Just now it looks as though Herb was almost sure to hold down right field for us this year.

Sherwood Magee is beginning to let out again. The fence buster has been forced to take things easy during the past week as a result of an injured shoulder. He refused to remain out of the game, however, and has been pastiming in the centre field. Magee has been unable to do any long, hard throwing, but has enjoyed himself by taking sweet swings at the ball when it was his turn to bat. If there is any ball player in the National League who takes more pleasure out of batting than Magee, I have yet to meet him.

Sherwood is one of those players who would rather bat than eat. He does not chop at the ball and be satisfied with a single just out of the reach of one of the infielders. His specialty is in taking a hard smash at the ball and sending it soaring far out into the outfield. When he hits the ball on the ground it travels at a seventy-five-mile a minute clip, which is not very pleasant for the infielder who tries to stop it.

* * *

I was very much pleased when Boss Stallings informed us that President Gaffney had secured Eddie Fitzpatrick from the Toronto Club of the International League. Fitzpatrick is an infielder and will be able to fill in at any of the infield berths if one of the regulars is put out of commission. He batted for .260 in the International League last season, but they tell me that he came across with most of his safeties when there were men on bases.

* * *

The .260 batter who drives out hits when the sacks are populated is of much more value to his team than the .300 hitter who is unable to deliver with a lusty wallop when a hit is needed. Fitzpatrick, it is said, is a fast, brainy player. He is the kind of athlete whom Stallings admires, and it would not surprise me if he picked up in his batting

LANGFORD—M'VEY TO BATTLE HERE

If the present plans of the Atlas A. A. management are pushed through Sam Langford and Sam McVey, colored heavyweights, will usher in the local boxing season in a twelve-round bout at the Arena, April 13.

Negotiations have been opened with McVey and it is expected that he will accept.

McVey is signed to battle Jack Johnson in Havana, Cuba, next month, but it is likely that the Johnson-Willard battle, scheduled there for April 4, will put off McVey's proposed scrap with the heavyweight champion. In other words it is assumed that Johnson would not desire to meet McVey so soon after his engagement with Willard.

Johnson-Willard Bout May Be Off

NEW YORK, March 13.—From "inside" sources it was learned that the Johnson-Willard championship fight, scheduled for Sunday, April 4, at Havana, Cuba, will positively not take place. American capitalists in Cuba are going to protest, fearing race riots. Plantation owners will hold a meeting to demand that all mixed fights be prohibited.

Promoters Jack Curley and Dick Klegin have announced that the mill will take place at Oriental Park racetrack. George Bradt, owner of the Havana Post, who built the stadium especially for fights, declares the battle will take place at his club or not at all.

Bradt is president of the Cuban Chamber of Commerce, and is known to be able to make good any threat.

Johnson on 'Mystery' Trip to New York

CLEVELAND, March 13.—Considerable mystery surrounds the hurried and somewhat unexpected visit of President Ban Johnson of the American League to this city. It is believed, however, that his visit has to do with the financial end of the Cleveland club, and it is regarded as likely that the Cleveland club of the American Association will be transferred elsewhere, the American League owners, as a rule, being known to be opposed to having a minor league team in the Forest City.

HUB FANS RESENT POWERS' DECISION

Boston fight "fans" who attended the Dave Powers and K. O. Palitz bout at New London Wednesday evening are up in arms over the reports sent to several Boston papers to the effect that the Malden boy lost the bout on a foul. Several of his followers have called at the AMERICAN office to say that Powers won by a K. O., while others brought copies of New London papers which give the local boy the long end. The following is taken from an account of the bout in the New London Telegraph:

> The final, a twelve-round bout between K. O. Palitz of this city and Dave Powers of Malden went to the visitor, when Palitz hit the floor after two minutes and forty seconds of furious milling in the third. Referee Moran counted the New Londoner out as he lay flat on his back.

Terry Brooks, the hard-hitting lightweight of the West End, is fast rounding into shape for his battle with Joe Egan at Gloucester next Monday night. If condition will count for anything, Brooks should romp home a winner. Both boys will weigh in at 142 pounds at 6 o'clock on the day of the contest.

Bill McCarney, manager of Carl Morris, was in town for a few minutes yesterday. McCarney took Joe Goldberg to Lawrence Thursday night to box Larry Burns. Today he will probably meet the directors of the Atlas Club of this city, and arrange to stage Morris here in a short while with some good opponent.

Phinney Boyle, the popular Lowell boxer, made a big hit in New York the other night. He is a very promising boy, and if taken along right should be up with the top-notchers in a year or two.

Mark Spencer writes from New York that he expects to meet Darkey Griffin there within a short while. Spencer is a clever little fellow and should do good in the big town.

Battling Jim Johnson and Harry Willis of New Orleans will swap punches for twenty rounds at Tommy Burns' Unity Club in New Orleans tonight. They should put up a slam-bang bout, as both are very rugged boxers.

Jack Dillon of Indianapolis, who meets Gunboat Smith at Milwaukee on the night of March 16, is so sure that he will be returned a winner that he is now negotiating for a match with Mike Gibbons.

Johnny Dundee, the fast little Italian boxer, was today matched to box Frankie Callahan of Brooklyn on the night of March 16. They will box ten rounds at the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn.

On the night of March 17 Eddie McGoorty will throw punches at Buck Crouse in the Duquesne Garden of Pittsburgh for six rounds. It should be a sterling contest, as both boxers are two of the best in this country.

Newark Withdraws Claims to Donald

AUBURN, N. Y., March 13.—Secretary John H. Farrell of the National Association, made public the following changes relating to minor leagues:

In the Georgia-Alabama League the franchise and players of the Gadsden (Ala.) club are transferred to Griffin, Ga., and Opelika and Selma, Ala., are dropped. The franchise and territory of Cordele, Ga., in the Georgia State League, are transferred to Dothan, Ga. The territory of Wheeling, W. Va., Erie, Pa., and Youngstown, Ohio, is added to the Central League.

The Newark (N. J.) club has withdrawn all claims to Pitcher Donald of the Brooklyn Nationals.

Holy Cross Baseball Captain Resigns

WORCESTER, March 13.—Robert F. Murray, captain of this year's Holy Cross baseball nine, has resigned his position and will not be seen in the box for Purple this year. Murray's record as a pitcher for the past three years has been a brilliant one.

A new captain is to be appointed within a few days, and it is expected that either Harry Carroll or Joe Murphy, both of them catchers for the past two years, will be selected.

Bushelman Gets Worcester Claim

AUBURN, N. Y., March 13.—Secretary John H. Farrell of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, has given out the following decisions of the National Board of Arbitration involving players and clubs in minor baseball:

Chagrined over their first set back of the season at the hands of a Canadian team, the Arena Hockey Club players are keen to go after the Aberdeens of Ottawa in the second game at the Arena tonight.

Thrilling hockey is promised tonight. In the defeat Thursday night it was the first time that the Arena had been outplayed by a team using its same style of Canadian hockey.

Cleveland, Laval, Queen's and New Haven played Canadian style hockey and fell before Captain Sequin's men, but the Aberdeens introduced a novel defence that baffled the Arena players. Playing against a four-man defence which at times ran to five, was more than the Arena attack could contend with.

Never was a team more confident of victory than Coach Rocque's men. They feel that they know Aberdeen's play and will play an attack that should penetrate the defence. From all angles the game looks like the best attraction of the season. Any team that can beat the Arena bunch at its own game and on its own surface is worth some attention and a big crowd is expected to follow the final match tonight.

Andover Announces Baseball Schedule

ANDOVER, March 13.—Manager G. R. West of the Andover baseball team announced the following schedule today. It includes twelve games and is about the same as last year, with the exception of the Yale second team, which is missing. Schedule:

April 28—M. I. T. '17. May 30—Yale freshmen. May 5—New Hampshire College. May 8—Princeton freshmen. May 12—Harvard second. May 15—Pilgrims. May 19—Harvard freshmen. May 22—Hotchkiss at Lakeville. May 25—Dartmouth freshmen. May 29—Worcester Academy. June 2—Cushing Academy. June 5—Exeter at Exeter.

M. I. T. Athlete Lands Lawrence Track Title

LAWRENCE, March 13.—William A. Sullivan, M. I. T., won first place in the Lawrence city track and field championship, scoring the highest number of points. He won the high jump and 600-yard run and finished second in the 300-yard run. Johnson High School relay established a local record of 2m. 13s. in a race against Lawrence High. John C. Lawler of the Irish-American A. A. C. of Boston and Bill Bingham, Harvard, gave exhibitions.

New Haven Seven Beats Aberdeens

NEW HAVEN, March 13.—The New Haven hockey team defeated the Aberdeens of Ottawa, 6 to 5, in one of the fastest games of the season. The home seven fairly swept the visitors from their feet during the first half, which ended with New Haven in the lead, 5 to 2.

Braves Sign Fitzpatrick

Move to Strengthen Infield

MACON, Ga., March 13.—"Big Chief" Stallings made his first important move to strengthen the Braves' infield when he signed Eddie Fitzpatrick, the clever infielder of the Toronto International League Club. Fitzpatrick will leave New York at a late hour this afternoon and will reach here Monday. He will then receive an opportunity to display his skill and speed on the dear old diamond.

Stallings has been trying to land Fitzpatrick for some time. He saw him play in many International League games several years ago and considered him a great ball player. Fitz, however, never had the good fortune to secure a job with a big league outfit.

The Braves made an offer to Fitzpatrick just before they boarded the rattle for the sunny South. The Toronto Club agreed to the deal but the player himself asserted that he would not join forces with the world's champions unless he was given half the money which was to be paid to the Toronto Club for his release.

Stallings Wants One More Extra Infielder.

This halted negotiations and it appeared as though Fitzpatrick would continue to pastime in minor league towns. Stallings, however, was still desirous of getting the youngster, as Bill Martin was his only extra infielder.

Fate then took a prominent part in causing the Braves to secure Fitzpatrick. Martin broke his right leg while practicing here and Stallings was placed in a position where he was forced to get another infielder at any cost. He immediately got in touch by wire with President Gaffney and the deal by which Fitzpatrick became the property of the Boston club was pushed through.

The player was in a position to dictate terms and he was undoubtedly signed up at a fat salary, while he may also have been given a bonus for agreeing to perform with Johnny Evers, Maranville & Co.

It is not any secret that Stallings is not yet satisfied with his infield. He wants to get one more extra man so that he will be well fortified with utility players regardless of what injuries may be sustained by his "billion dollar" quartette during the league season.

A club without a strong secondary defence has but little chance to grab a championship flag. The Braves would probably have been put out of the running last year if they did not have Whitted, Deal and Dugey to take the place of the regulars when they were forced out of the game for one reason or other.

Bill Martin, the former Georgetown star, who broke his right leg, is resting comfortably. The youngster is not suffering from much physical pain, but he is downcast as a result of his poor fortune. He seems to be followed by a jinx. He was playing a sensational game in practice here and was almost certain to be retained by Stallings.

The "Miracle Man" was a great admirer of Martin and believes that he would develop into a high grade ball player.

There is but little chance of Martin being able to play ball again before August. It is but natural that he will favor his injured leg, as he has had it broken twice already. Therefore, he will have a difficult task landing a regular berth with the Braves.

Braves Will Have an Easy Time of It Today.

This will be an easy day for the Braves. They will engage in batting and fielding practice in the morning, while the majority of the members of the squad will also take part in a workout in the afternoon.

Stallings will start for his big plantation at Haddock with a party early this afternoon. Eight ball players and the honorable newspaper scribes will make the trip. The players who will journey to Haddock are Rudolph, Tyler, James, Whaling, Maranville, Moran, Evers and Smith.

The party will remain at Haddock over Sunday and will start for Milledgeville early Monday morning, where the Braves are booked to meet the Georgia Military College in a little old-fashioned game of baseball.

The main Braves' squad will make the march from Macon to Milledgeville early Monday under the command of General Hermann Nickerson, who is some field leader, if we are to believe his own sworn statement.

Team Plays Military Collegians Monday.

The military college team has been coached by Tom Hughes. Thomas should know how to coach a baseball club as he draws a very handsome salary for playing ball with the Braves. He informs us that he has a classy aggregation of diamond stars under his control and that they will make things mighty interesting for the young men who won the World's Series last Fall. Maybe, but then again—Well, what's the use of saying any cruel things about the ambitious young athletes coached by Hughes?

It is our earnest hope that the military college has a better ball club than the one which represents Mercer College. We do not wish to infer that the boys from Mercer are not on a speaking acquaintance with the grand old national game. They have a good college team but it was a shame to pit them against Gaffney's hired men.

Joe Mayer Captures Amateur Cue Title

PHILADELPHIA, March 13.—Joseph Mayer of Philadelphia won the amateur billiard championship of the United States, defeating J. F. Poggenburg, New York, in the final match of the fifteenth annual tournament of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players. The score was 400 to 216.

Yale Fencers Beat Penn.

NEW HAVEN, March 13.—Yale barely finished ahead of University of Penn in their fencing duel by a 5 to 4 score. Captain Van Buskirk of the visitors won all three bouts.

'HAPPY' FINDS SOX HURLERS BUSY LOT

By HAPPY.

HAPPY.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark, March 13.—Well, by this time tomorrow everybody will be on hand except Harry Hooper, the boss says. And you can bet your life there will be some tall doings next week.

The boys already here have had a hard week of it, with good weather. Hobby turned up Thursday; and seeing how stiff he was in his first workout gave an idea of how limber the rest of the bunch had got.

Hobby'll be as full of the old pep as the rest of them by the middle of next week.

Harry Hooper isn't going to report till late in the month. He's working the kinks out at some place out West.

MAKING PITCHERS HUM SOME.

The boss is making the pitchers hum some. I guess he's looking 'em over pretty close. He and Cady do most of the catching, but Thomas and Hailey warm the pitchers up, too. There is Leonard and Gregg and Scott and Cooper and Shore and Collins and Foster, all out there every day working their heads off; and Joe Wood is going like he did in 1912. You can't beat the Speed Boy when he's there; and it looks like it was the big time for him this Summer.

Heinie Wagner gets better every day. He picks them up like they were lying still; and he gets them over to first so fast that it's a case of now you see it and now you don't, every time.

Old Bill Sweeney is working like a horse. And believe me, he's there, forty ways. I'm for Bill, every time.

SOX WILL MAKE 'EM GO.

"Germany" Schaefer is still around, and Dauss. Dauss has been here over a week. He says the other day: "The bunch that beats these boys this year will have to be on their toes some, or I'm a blind man." And he's right, at that.

I know the old stuff when I see it. See? And anybody that tries to tell me the Red Sox won't win that pennant has got an argument on his hands. Mr. Lannin—say, you ought to see the smile on his face these days. He's out in the bleachers every day with a grin a foot wide. He's seeing that pennant already.

And listen. I don't like to talk about myself, but say! When the bunch slows down a little bit, am I there? Watch me.

"HAPPY'S" SOME PLAYER.

I get out in the outfield and catch the birds right out of the air, I'm so full of class. No kidding, the boss is apt to get me to show the regular outfielders how to do the trick when they breeze in. Tris Speaker hasn't got a thing on me.

And at that, I'm getting fat. You can't beat the eats they give you here. There'll be a lot of fellows who won't know me when I get back to Boston.

But I'll soon wise 'em up. I'll just tell 'em: "I'm Happy, the guy that picked the Sox to win the pennant." See?

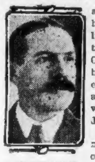
Pitchers Now in Good Shape

HOT SPRINGS, March 13.—This was the last day that the freak ball-tossers—the pitchers and catchers—had the limelight for their training stunt. On Monday the big time players will arrive and then there will be some doings.



A. H. C. Mitchell.

The battery men tramped out to the ball yard as usual this morning to wind up their week's work. They were feeling very chipper. Soreness all gone, no lame wings, salary day nearer, and nothing to worry about.

It has been a good hard week for them. The weather, which started off in chilly fashion when work began last Monday, has been growing warmer day by day, and conditions are rapidly approaching the ideal.

Duffy Lewis Wires He's in Best of Condition.

The pitchers are now in shape to do some cutting loose when the stars arrive next week. While the practice has been hard, the boys were not allowed to put any speed in their throws, and that is the reason there are no sore arms. Uncle Bill is very well satisfied with the progress made by his players.

Duffy Lewis, the regular left fielder of the Red Sox, wired to Uncle Bill from Denver that he will be in Hot Springs on Sunday. The message also contained the information that he was in fine condition. Carrigan passed the telegram around among the boys, and it was read and thumbed over. Finally Wagner asked, "How much did they stick you for this telegram?"

"Not a cent. It came prepaid," replied the manager.

A ball player was never before known to pay for a wire sent to a club official. Considerable silence folowed Uncle Bill's statement. Wagner was the first to regain his poise, and he came back with this query:

President Lannin Works Out with "Hired Men."

"Where did he get the money?"

"I don't know," replied Carrigan, "but he must be well fixed. He wrote Secretary Riley not to send him a ticket to Hot Springs, as he would pay for the transportation himself."

The players gasped in amazement. Duffy has violated all known rules of the game. It was all right, in a desperate case, to prepay a telegram, but for a ball player to advance his own money for transportation to training camp was beyond comprehension. Of course, the amount would be refunded to Duffy, but the action was unprecedented, and for a time the players were in a semi-comatose state.

"Gee whiz!" remarked Sweeney when he had come out of his fainting spell, "next thing you know Duffy will be paying for a street car ride. I tell you this game of baseball is going to the dogs."

President Lannin took a light workout with his players. He not only caught Joe Wood's delivery for a while, but later took his turn at bat. In this he was not so successful.

"Germany" Schaefer was in the box. He started off by soaking the president in the arm, and then his puzzling windup so disconcerted Mr. Lannin that he failed to hit much of anything but the atmosphere.

The boss threatens to practice up on batting and have his revenge on Schaefer next year. The Dutchman left to join his Federal League club today, so will be seen no more around these parts.

The Archbishop of York used to tell this story. He said he would not say anything against Yorkshiremen, but they possessed one characteristic which might be considered as a virtue or as a defect, according to the view they took of it. One Yorkshire native, who had become well-to-do, was asked by some one for a subscription. He demurred, and was pressed with the observation:

"But see how you have prospered in your business," whereupon he remarked:

"Don't you come any of your religion on me. The Almighty wouldn't have trusted me with so much brass if He didn't think I could keep it!"

At a certain Scottish mansion, which has a reputation for scanty fare, a gentleman was inquiring of the gardener about a dog which he had given to the laird some time ago.

The gardener showed him a lank greyhound.

"No, no," said the gentleman, "the dog I gave your master was a mastiff, not a greyhound!" "Indeed, any dog might soon become a greyhound by stopping here!" replied the gardener.

Their Married Life

Helen Carries the Letter to Warren and He Does Not Open It Before Her.

Copyright, 1915, International News Service.

HELEN had Nora spread lunch for her on a corner of the dining room table.

"I'm not very hungry, Nora," she said when Nora asked her if she didn't feel well. "Just warm up some potatoes and open a pot of that strawberry jam, and we'll have the lamb chops."

As she ate Helen tried to decide what to do about the letter. She might take it down town and drop in on Warren casually. That was a good plan, but then if Warren should suspect that she had taken any interest beyond the ordinary in it things might be very uncomfortable. She hardly knew what to do. She had heard that if men thought their wives were jealous it made them furious. Helen for the first time in her life was uncertain as to just how to proceed.

Nora came in and set an eclair down before her. Helen fancied that it didn't taste as good as usual and pushed it aside after a few mouthfuls. She would go down town and do a little shopping and then go into Warren's office with a couple of small packages. She could hand him the letter with a nonchalant air, too, and perhaps her fears were groundless anyway.

She dressed carefully in her brown suit and a new straw hat of tan straw with little rose-colored wings standing up smartly from its crown. It was very becoming, and as Helen turned away from her dressing table she felt satisfied with her appearance. In the subway she met Mrs. Stevens and for the first time in her life felt like not talking to her old friend. She remembered that it was just about a year ago that Mrs. Stevens had come to her, blue and unhappy, to ask about her own husband's fidelity. It seemed strange that she should be in the subway just now. Helen remembered how secure she had felt in Warren's fidelity at the time. Now it seemed as though the foundations of her life were crumbling under her.

Mrs. Stevens spied Helen almost immediately and crossed over to sit beside her.

"Now where are you bound for, all dressed up?" she queried gayly.

"Just down shopping," Helen answered, "and then I am going to call for Warren."

SHE IS PLANNING TO MEET HER HUSBAND

"I am going to a matinee with Jane Graham, and then I am going to meet Mr. Stevens and go out to dinner."

"Have you a new girl yet?" asked Helen with interest. Mrs. Stevens' girl had left to get married and Mrs. Stevens had bemoaned the fact ever since. She declared that she would never have a maid she liked as well.

"Not yet," she admitted, "but I hope to have soon. You'll be losing Nora soon, won't you?"

"In the Summer some time, but Maggie is coming over and I am to have her."

"Lucky woman. Who is Maggie, may I ask?"

"Nora's younger sister. Of course I can't expect to have a paragon like Nora, but at least I can be assured that she is clean and honest."

"That's right. Do you think you'll have to teach her everything you want done? They say greenhorns are terribly stupid."

"I hope not. Nora says not."

"Well, if you hear of anyone, let me know. Are you getting off here?"

Helen said good-by to Mrs. Stevens and rode on. She bought a shirtwaist and had it put up in a small parcel so as to have something to carry when she went to see Warren. Then she bought a box of cinnamon candy of which Warren was fond and had a soda to take up time. She wanted to get down there just about closing up time and come home with Warren.

Linger as she would it still seemed early when she entered the huge office building and took the elevator. A boy met her as she opened the office door and asked whom she wished to see.

"Mr. Curtis, please," she said with some dignity. "Tell him his wife would like to see him."

WARREN GREETS HER IN HIS OFFICE

The boy vanished and Helen sat down to wait. She went to Warren's office so seldom that it was quite a novelty. As a rule Warren did not like her to come there. He had often said that there was no need of a man's mixing up his business and his home life, and Helen, although she did not exactly agree with him, was always willing to abide by his wishes.

The boy came out after a minute or two and asked Mrs. Curtis to come in. Helen followed him into Warren's office and Warren rose to meet her. His stenographer, Miss Wells, looked up from the typewriter and bowed cheerily. Helen liked the girl very much, better than any stenographer Warren had ever had. She seemed so bright and cheery and she always dressed so neatly that it was a pleasure to look at her.

"Hello Helen," said Warren cheerily. "How did you happen to come down?"

"Oh, I was shopping and I finished so that I could take you home with me. It seemed so foolish to go home alone."

Warren busied himself with some letters on his desk and Miss Wells after pulling some sheets of paper out of the typewriter slipped its cover on and rose and went into the other room.

"I have a letter for you," said Helen, taking the bull by the horns and fumbling around in her bag.

Warren looked up. "For me?" He asked. "All right, hand it over."

Helen handed him the letter without speaking and she watched his face closely as she did. He took the letter and with a glance at the postmark slipped it into his pocket. Somehow Helen felt that it was just what she expected. Warren had not left her chance for any questions unless she wanted to appear curious. She swallowed nervously and then asked as calmly as she could."

"Business?"

Warren looked up absently. "What, the letter? Yes, in a way.

The answer was evasive and Helen could not ask anything more because with a final sweep of everything into his drawer Warren closed his desk and rose to go.

"We'll stay downtown to dinner; would you like that?" he said good naturedly.

"All right, dear, but I'll have to telephone Nora."

"Go ahead while I wash up. I'm as hungry as a bear."

And Helen turned to the telephone with a little ache at her heart that she had never felt before in her life.

Strange Sirens of Sunny Seas

The Portuguese Man-of-War Marvel to Science and a Thing of Rainbow Beauty

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

THERE is in the American Museum of Natural History in New York a wonderfully life-like and beautiful glass model of one of the queerest animals in the world, a "Portuguese man-of-war." It is an inhabitant of the ocean, a sailor, loving especially the warm waters of the Gulf Stream, with their gleams of tropical sunshine, and their little noon-day breezes. Here is a photograph of it under full sail, as it appears in the museum, but without the flower-like coloring which makes it as beautiful as some strange, delicately tinted orchid.

The translucent tentacles that hang like shimmering strings of pearls from the floating form, are, in this instance, perhaps two yards in length, but in some specimens they attain a length of twenty feet. They are armed with rows of nettle-cells, which sting like electric sparks and are fatal in their effects upon small fishes.

The name comes, as may be guessed, from the striking resemblance to the outline of a ship under sail, and this name is further justified by the fact that as the strange hull is driven along by the wind it tacks and veers in a most surprising way when struck by little flaws or tossed in the troughs of little wavelets, wimpling the broad, smooth swells of a midsummer sea. I remember once seeing a Portuguese man-of-war from the deck of an Atlantic liner, which was so magically beautiful, with its rainbow hues, and so fascinating with its apparently studied evolutions, that people dropped their books on all sides and rushed to the rails to lean over and watch:

"—the ship of pearl which, poets feign,
Sails the unshadowed main,
The venturous bark that flings
On the sweet Summer winds its purpled wings
In gulfs enchanted——"

But this captivatingly beautiful organism is as much a marvel to science as it is an inspiration to poets. It is not a single creature, as it seems to be, but multiplex—a very Briareus in the multiplicity of the individual existences which are included under its form. It goes seeking its prey, like a ship full of pirates, but dressed out on a holiday show of pearly flags and gleaming pennons. For all its beauty and grace, it is a polyp, a "siphonophora." Many polyps are fast to rocks and remain fixed all their lives; this one has received the gift of free-swimming, and, as we have seen, it has developed into a floating Siren, or rather a company disguised as one. The siphonophora are all composed of colonies of polyps like this. They are all beautifully colored, delicate in appearance, transparent or translucent. In them the principle of the devotion of the individual to the service of the community has been carried so far that the community itself has taken on the form and aspect of an individual.

The Portuguese Man-of-War, One of the Wonders of the World

One of these beautiful organisms is full of zooids—that is, undeveloped individuals, or individuals developed only in one direction, and that for the benefit of the colony. For instance, the balloon-like sail of the Portuguese man-of-war, which serves it also for a float when it rises to the surface of the water, is a zooid, or mass of zooids, whose sole function is to be useful to the colony in the ways just mentioned. The stinging tentacles are composed of zooids whose entire active existence is summed up in stinging for the colony. Some of the siphonophora have "swimming bells," whose purpose is to propel the organism through the water. These swimming bells are composed of zooids, chained to their work like galley slaves. Others have zooids whose sole function is to feed the colony, and so on.

It would be interesting to know the full history and all the internal economy of a Portuguese man-of-war. The members of the organism which are grouped just under the balloon sail look, from their position, as if they might be oligarchs of the strange community. One may be sure that there are oligarchs there, for no community was ever formed in which entire equality reigned throughout.

Explorers in Romance

The Journeys We Can Take Without Moving from Our Own Fireside

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"FOR to admire and for to see,
For to behold this world so wide—
It never done no good to me,
But I carnt 'elp it, if I tried."

So sings Kipling's victim of "Wanderlust." And with his song, travel becomes an obsession that takes a man up and down the face of the earth—a wanderer useless and bewitched by the mere need to roam. But even in such poor case, travel is a thing of romance. Think in your own heart, how much more respect you have for the tramp caught by the lure of the road than for the cheap beggar of your city streets.

And travel on its higher planes holds all the romance and poetry and much of the progress and growth of the ages in its ken.

True stories are not so good as fairy tales in that they do not always end happily. The brave hero who discovers a continent is not rewarded with the hand of the lovely princess in real life. His story does not end "And so they were married and lived happy ever after." But even if his life ends in prison his story never ends.

The discoverer is the world's hero. His biography is a true romance. The continent he goes to seek becomes a glorious monument to that travel which is founded on the principle—not of "for to admire and for to see"—but, to seek out and to give to the world the gift of new lands and new possibilities.

After the discoverer comes a vast army of explorers and soldiers and governors of strange places, and pioneers who put the land under cultivation, and observing travelers who give the world the record of what they have seen. For each soldier in the legion which brings to us knowledge of strange places, we feel a romantic thrill of admiration. Even as Desdemona listened breathlessly to the exploits of her Moor, so all of us today are held by the tales of a traveler returned from far places.

A LITTLE CLERK.

An exquisite little story has been written of a poor old clerk who took each year a glorious vacation. He went home to his attic room for his two weeks of freedom and there he pored over time tables and folders and Baedekers and prospectuses of various sorts and all the wonderful descriptive literature of travel. Each year, after this fashion, he took a thrilling trip. In imagination he had gone up and down the flowery kingdom of Japan and the ice-packed regions of Siberia. Alaska and the Riviera were alike known to him. He knew the difference in the azure blue of the far-famed Mediterranean and the marvelous green-blue of Lugano nestled below the Alps in the north of Italy.

He had traveled widely with romance in his heart, and with his imagination kindled to make for itself a picture of the far places of the earth. At last came the opportunity actually to go afar, actually to see the regions he had visioned. And he was afraid; afraid lest reality disturb and destroy his romance; afraid lest, seeing, he should find the lands he had dreamed of cold and austere or hot and parched. Travel to him was a thing of the heart, not of the eye. He liked the comforts of imagining himself at the top of the Jungfrau from the vantage point of his own high bedchamber. But the necessities of travel, of going out from Interlaken early in the morning and changing at the Grindelwald to a cogwheel railroad with which to ascend the bridal-veiled mountain terrified him.

The world is full of people who travel like the tramp sailor of Kipling's song merely "for to admire and for to see," or who, like our poor old clerk, long to travel and yet fear its discomforts and disappointments and difficulties too much to go.

In the discoverer, the explorer, the observant traveler, the pioneer of strange places, all the strength of desire to admire and see, all the brave willingness to endure hardship, all the faith in ability to conquer the wilderness, unite most gloriously.

To pioneers of travel the world is everlastingly indebted. All glory to such! But those of us who cannot be pioneers and discoverers can still explore.

Every traveler should be an explorer. Every traveler should find as he goes to new places some message for himself, some knowledge he can bring back and interpret to the stay-at-homes. Travel is never barren or wasted for the keen-eyed observer who in exploring the familiar finds ever something new in it.

ALWAYS SOMETHING TO SAY

The trip from Boston to New York, however often you have taken it, offers new vision and new inspiration if you bring romance to travel. Travel in far lands furnishes romance and adventure because of its very newness and strangeness. But to travel in familiar places one can bring "the romance of iron and steel," the glow of a setting sun, the ripple of quiet waters.

After taking the Boston-New York trip dozens and dozen of times, one day the train slowed up as we neared Attleboro and I discovered that what looked to me like a thick tangle of woodland was in reality the site of a bloody Indian battlefield. Think of the romance that conjures up! Think how marvelous it is to whirl comfortably by in a five-hour trip that carries one through four States and over two hundred and fifty miles and to know the while that all this was once trackless wilderness with savages lurking to destroy, and that two hundred and fifty miles was the journey of a week instead of an afternoon.

There is romance like that in riding from Fourteenth street to Times Square, in New York. There is romance like that in a trip down Wabash avenue in Chicago! There is new, pulsing, live romance in traveling the rebuilt streets of the reborn San Francisco. Everywhere, in every city, even the shortest trip holds romance if one admires and sees—and thinks as well.

One of our cleverest newspaper writers said that an hour trip in the subway would afford so keen an observer as H. G. Wells or Arnold Bennett material for a three-volume novel. And yet those of us who have no greater excitement than traveling our city streets complain because life is so dull.

We live in a little world that is all unexplored. If you have no more chance to travel than from the North End to Jamaica Plain, you can bring high adventure and splendid emprise to that trip. Perhaps it would do you more good than to trot up and down the wide world restlessly, unintelligently and merely to behold what you do not attempt to understand.

If chance affords the opportunity to travel, "strange countries for to see," take it by all means. But before you go learn a little of the history and tradition of the place you are to see. Go with the intelligent desire to understand the people and interpret the customs of the country to which you are going.

If good fortune takes you to Florence and you have never heard of Andrea del Sarto or Leonardo da Vinci—if the Pitti Palace and the Uffizi Gallery mean nothing to you and the Arno holds no tradition, you are likely to see nothing but a narrow streeted, dirty city with some rather pretty suburbs. And yet Florence has been called the "garden spot of the world." Take an imaginary trip (like the old clerk) through it now. Get ready really to see it if ever the chance comes.

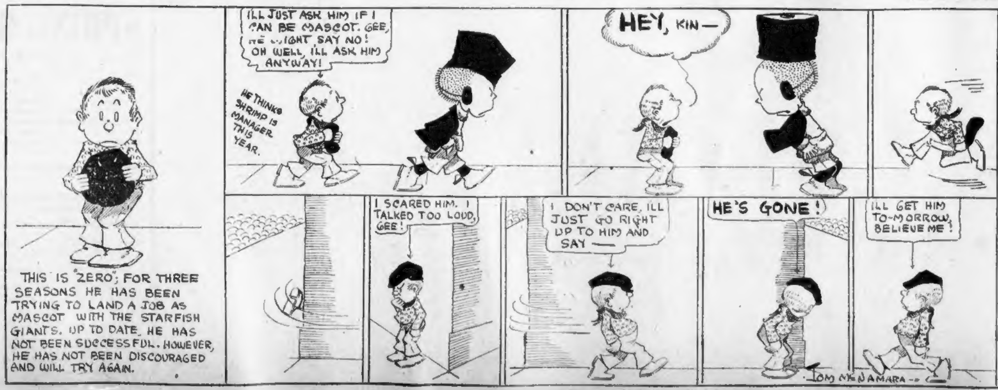
Zero Feels a Little Below Zero To-day



THIS IS "ZERO"; FOR THREE SEASONS HE HAS BEEN TRYING TO LAND A JOB AS MASCOT WITH THE STARFISH GIANTS. UP TO DATE, HE HAS NOT BEEN SUCCESSFUL. HOWEVER, HE HAS NOT BEEN DISCOURAGED AND WILL TRY AGAIN.
I'LL JUST ASK HIM IF I CAN BE MASCOT. GEE, HE MIGHT SAY NO! OH WELL, I'LL ASK HIM ANYWAY!
HE THINKS SHRIMP IS MANAGER THIS YEAR.
HEY, KIN—
I SCARED HIM. I TALKED TOO LOUD, GEE!
I DON'T CARE, I'LL JUST GO RIGHT UP TO HIM AND SAY —
HE'S GONE!
I'LL GET HIM TO-MORROW, BELIEVE ME!

SUFFRAGISTS TO HAVE ORANGE DAY

The Suffragists have made plans to sell oranges on Orange Day, next Saturday, March 20, the proceeds to go toward the coming campaign, when suffrage goes before the people on referendum.

March 20 is the day celebrated in California as "Orange Day," and suffragists here decided to observe the date.

The idea is to orangeaid the Cause, as it were, and a big consignment of oranges donated by the California Fruit Growers' Association is on its way to Boston from California. California being a suffrage State every orange is guaranteed to bring a suffrage message for the eater, even though he may not realize it at the moment of mastication.

The Orange Day will have special significance from the fact that orange is the suffrage color. Oranges will be distributed at the City Hospital, Carney Hospital, the Massachusetts General Hospital, the Children's Hospital and the Jewish Hospital.

A committee of five, in charge of the preparations, includes Mrs. Maud Wood Park, Miss Margaret Foley, Mrs. M. H. Page, Miss Mabel Willard and Mrs. Ida M. Hebbard.

The Rev. Kelly Jenness of Tremont M. E. Church has this to say of "Billy" Sunday:

"Boston doesn't yet understand what is Billy Sunday—it is a movement rather than a man. During the last few years in Western Pennsylvania, where I was on hand for a couple of the Billy Sunday campaigns, I realized that the movement was the obeying of the eleventh commandment—you will find it as the climax of all the ten—that the words of the Lord should be written on the door-posts and talked about on the streets. Or, as we would say it in our day, 'Get religion into the newspapers, advertise it. Make it the thing that people are talking about.'"

FORM SECURITY LEAGUE BRANCH

The Massachusetts branch of the National Security League was organized at Young's Hotel with Major Guy Murchie, president, and W. M. Green, secretary. Governor Walsh, former Governor Guild, former Secretary of the Navy Meyer and Mayor Curley were chosen honorary vice-presidents. The executive committee consists of Robert L. Raymond, General Hugh Bancroft, J. Randolph Coolidge, Grenville S. MacFarland, Colonel Edward H. Edwards, S. D. Parkman, George S. Mumford, C. C. Converse, Louis K. Liggett, Robert Luce, William E. McKay and Dr. Hugh Cabot.

The meeting was called to order by Andrew B. Humphrey of New York, executive secretary of the National Security League. He introduced former Governor Guild, who said the object of the organization was not alone to provide for defence against a hostile foreign soldiery, but to provide security in time of need against flood, as in the case of Holyoke; against fire, as in the case of Chelsea and Salem, and riot, as in the case in Lawrence. He said that the need of a second line of defence was great.

"The national guard," said the former Governor, "looks formidable on paper, but it is largely on paper."

Mayor Curley said there was as much danger in a republic being top-heavy with an army as in being unprepared for war, but he believed that between being in that condition and being prepared for war there was a happy medium. He said he believed in a citizen soldiery and had no desire for the United States to have a much larger standing army. The Mayor thought it might be a good idea to provide this country with means of defence through short term enlistments. If 100,000 men were enlisted for a year each year in fifteen years, allowing for shrinkage from death and other causes, in fifteen years this country could have a million men for a reserve with definite ideas of military service and organization, he said.

"As it is now, under unforseen contingencies, we might," he declared, "fare as badly regards treaty rights as Belgium."

He spoke of the influence of organizations upon Congress, citing as an example the appropriation made by every Congress of $400,000 for seeds. This, he said, was due to the influence of the Farmers' Alliance and kindred bodies. Until advocates of rivers and harbors improvement organized, Congress used to allot about $300,000 a year for that purpose. After they made their organized influence felt, Congress appropriated $10,000,000 in one year alone. The Mayor said he hoped that "the spirit of preparedness would be the order of the day." When he referred to the requisities of modern warfare and what the invasion of Mexico would mean, he said:

"According to General Leonard, a real soldier, it would cost 600,000 American lives and take fifteen years."

Help California to Celebrate Orange Day, Which Is March 20

Incidentally You Will Help Yourself to Health if You Make Orange Eating a Habit

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

California's great festival, Orange Day, will be held this year on March 20. The whole country is invited to help in its celebration.

There will be an elaborate program at the great Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco, and in many towns throughout California.

But all that those living outside California need to do to take part in the celebration is to buy oranges—California oranges—eat some of them, and give the rest to their families and friends.

California has done great service to this nation. She has contributed largely to its mineral and vegetable wealth, she has provided a mild climate where those who cannot endure the rigors of an Eastern Winter can spend Winter months in Summer sunshine.

The first real gold that came from her soil was in tiny grains which were discovered in the yellow clay around Sutter's Mill, near Sacramento.

The disclosure of that gold deposit led to a successful search for more gold, and brought thousands of immigrants across the plains and around the Horn to find out what a wonderful country California was.

And those who settled in the central and southern parts of the State found that the golden oranges, planted by the Spanish missionaries, were just as valuable as the golden grains that were taken from the placers and left in the pans after the gravel had been shaken out.

Orange growing is now a great California industry—one of the greatest and most important industries in the world.

At the time when the apples stored for the Winter are becoming dried and worthless—when there are no berries, grapes, peaches or pears save those in the windows of the expensive fruiterer or the greenhouses of the wealthy, the oranges are in golden piles on every fruit stand, and within the reach of everybody.

In them is the fruit acid that is necessary to keep the digestion in perfect condition. They are suited to the most delicate invalid. They are good before breakfast, at lunch, at dinner—between meals.

Children can eat them until they can eat no more without any injurious effect.

Even nursing babies can sip the juice when most foods are too strong for their tiny stomachs.

Everybody can eat oranges, and if everybody would eat them there would be far less work for the doctors.

Furthermore, a far larger proportion of children would grow up to become healthy and vigorous men and women.

If you help California to celebrate this important festival you will get the orange-eating habit.

It was in California that Nature was taught to grow oranges without seeds, oranges with thin skins, and plump, delicious sections filled with health-giving juice.

The few trees that the old missionaries planted have had a countless multitude of descendants, and other trees have been brought from all parts of the world where oranges flourish best.

Besides the orange orchards are groves of lemons and figs, and very recently the date has been imported from Arabia and made to contribute its share toward feeding the nation.

California is a rich and wonderful State, a land of opportunity, made Winter proof by the balmy winds that blow from the Japan current, and with an exhaustless soil that can produce almost any known product.

You should visit it and the wonderful Panama-Pacific Fair if you can this Spring and pick the oranges off the trees, where you see the ripe golden fruit, the young green fruit and the blossoms growing all at the same time.

If you cannot do this you can at least buy California oranges on Orange Day, or before Orange Day, and eat as many as you can, making sure to have an abundance to give to the children.

You will help a great State observe a real holiday, and you will acquire a habit that will prove of enduring benefit.

How We Love to Be Deceived

By DOROTHY DIX

ONE of the most curious of human weaknesses is that we all enjoy being deceived if the deception ministers to our vanity. We are not only ready, but anxious, to swallow any lie, however preposterous, if it flatters us, and we never, never look a gift compliment in the mouth.

Most of us, of course, pretend that this isn't true, but there is at least one man who has the courage of his egotism. In a recent divorce case, the aggrieved wife, in showing cause why she should be given a separation and alimony from her husband, submitted a set of rules that he had drawn up for her conduct. Among other "do's" and "don'ts" was this illuminating item:

"You must deceive me continually by telling me that I am handsome and fascinating, and that you adore me, and could not live without me."

Probably every one who read this extraordinary theory of a wife's duty smiled—but with a wry mouth. It hit too near home, for the only difference between this man and the balance of us is that he has the candor to speak out what we all secretly desire.

The honest truth is that there are certain matters about which we want to be deceived. Our happiness depends upon our believing that those about us see us in a light that we know in our souls to be impossible and with a halo about us that we are perfectly aware we do not possess.

What Should They Do?

This is especially the case between married couples, and so it becomes a nice ethical question whether it is not really the duty of husbands and wives to perjure themselves like gentlemen and ladies as regards their opinion of each other. Perhaps husbands and wives do have a right to expect to be deceived by the partners of their bosoms, and so this husband's demand of his wife was not so absurd, after all.

Take the case, for instance, of the woman who has grown more than fair, fat and forty. When she asks her husband how she looks, she is simply imploring him to deceive her. She wants him to assure her that she was the most beautiful woman at the ball, and that in his eyes she is better looking than the day he married her.

Of course, the woman knows this for the palpable lie that it is. She knows that her husband would have to be a doddering idiot to think that a fat, grizzle-headed, pasty-cheeked, dull-eyed woman of fifty was in the Venus class with slim, lithe young girls, with the roses of youth in their cheeks, and the glint of the morning in the gold of their hair and the dew of their eyes.

Nevertheless, the man who rises gallantly to this tarra-diddle makes his wife perfectly happy. She knows what he is telling her can't possibly be true, but she hugs the dear deception to her breast, and it makes life worth living for her.

Precisely the same thing is true of men. They want their wives to deceive them, and if their wives won't deceive them they go and hunt up some other lady who will. Find a home in which the wife is Veracious Jane and hands out to hubby her real opinion of him, and you will find a home in which there is discord and ultimate divorce.

Men Are Covetous

Just as a woman wants her husband to tell her that she is young and beautiful to him, so every man wants his wife to apparently put him on a pedestal and knock her forehead on the floor before him and make him feel that he is as big and strong as a lion, and as much of an oracle as Solomon.

If the woman has any intelligence, the husband knows that she is bound to size him up as she would any other human being, that, indeed, her very closeness to him must give her the measure of his littleness and his lack of judgment as no one else can have it, but his whole happiness is bound up in whether she deceives him or not on this point.

If she calls his attention to his faults and criticises his conduct and ridicules his mistakes, he is chagrined and miserable. But if she makes him believe that to her he is a paragon of all the virtues she makes life worth while for him, just as the insincere flattery of the husband makes life worth while for the old wife.

A philosopher once said that the best loved and most admired among us could not survive the shock of hearing the real opinions that our friends entertained of us. Certainly no marriage could last another minute if we knew how we really look to our husbands and wives, how big our faults loom in their eyes, and how infinitesimal our virtues.

Nor could we endure to know how often we bore them when we think we are fascinating them, how often they see through our little artifices when we think them blind, nor how often they are praying for patience to endure us when we picture them as pining for us in our absence.

Let us thank heaven for the kindly deceit that pads the angles of matrimony, and for our ability to believe what we want to believe. For when it comes to being deceived about our own charms, we all exhibit a credulity that would make a two-year-old child look like a suspicious and doubting Thomas.

BOOKS

By JANE M'LEAN

HOW I love them, every one,
Sorrow stained or flecked with fun,
Musty with the passing years,
Rife with joy or marked with tears,
Spent with them, the hours that fly,
Passing, slip unheeded by.

Pages old, yet warm with life,
Storied knights and ceaseless strife,
Holy Grails and missions won,
Gray walls and the setting sun,
And the rain falls on the eaves
As I turn the treasured leaves.

Many moons that come and go
Drag for others passing slow,
And I strive to live away
From my romance world each day
As one cheerfully will lend
All his treasures to a friend.

Harvard's Hunt for an Educated Man

Perhaps He May Not Prove Very Valuable, Even if Such a Man Can Be Found

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

Harvard University, whose business it is to turn out educated men, and which spends a great deal of money for that purpose, is now hunting the country over to discover if a really educated man exists.

The search thus far has been without success.

No man, educated according to the Harvard theory of education, has been found. He may be found sooner or later, but if he is found, it remains to be seen whether he was worth finding.

For a man acquainted with the language of the ancient Assyrians and understanding the philosophy of the Hindoos and having the writings of Confucius at his tongue's end, all of which requirements come within the Harvard definition of education, might not be of any use whatever to his fellow citizens, or to posterity.

Just what constitutes education is a question over which people have disputed for many years.

A wise Englishman defined education as "knowing something about everything and everything about something."

That is a very fair definition, but it is too exacting for ordinary men.

Few men can know a little about everything, if everything means the great sum of knowledge acquired by the human race since the beginning of time.

No man can know everything about any one thing. For example, thousands of very able men are now trying to know all there is to know about electricity.

They have harnessed it and used it for the great benefit of humanity, but they can only conjecture its nature, and every day they learn things concerning it which convince them that all that has been learned already is as nothing compared to that which can be learned by years of study.

Thomas A. Edison, asked to define an educated man, replied:

"My idea of an educated man is one who is somewhat familiar with every branch of the environment in which we live—social, commercial and scientific. There are undoubtedly many such men in America, but I cannot name them offhand."

We believe that Mr. Edison's estimate is rather optimistic. That in this busy age, when all men must specialize in order to exist, a man even somewhat familiar with every branch of our social, commercial and scientific environment would be hard to find.

Mr. Edison's definition, however, is a much better definition than that of the Harvard professors.

There are many men who are extremely well educated who know nothing of the Assyrian tongue, and less of the philosophy of the Yogis.

Abraham Lincoln was one of them. Mr. Edison may know something of the Yogis perhaps, but we do not believe he could read ancient Assyrian without considerable help. Yet he is a very well educated man, and generally educated, as well as educated in his difficult profession.

It is quite possible for a man to be educated without knowing Latin, Greek or any modern language save his own. The lack of this knowledge, of course, closes many doors of pleasure and information to him, but he can in his own language find the means of a complete and a satisfactory education.

Let a man know his own specialty thoroughly, keeping up with the latest developments and discoveries, and the best thought, let him be fairly familiar with history and literature, let him know generally what science is doing to promote human well being, and let him keep well informed on the news of the day, and he can be safely called an educated man.

As far as usefulness is concerned such a man is better educated than one who can unravel the tangled philosophy of the ancients, or who can write an essay on the influence of the Greek drama upon modern civilization.

The sum of human knowledge grows steadily greater. No man can hope to explore but a few little coasts in that vast ocean.

But what he seeks to know he should know, and know thoroughly. Shakespeare and the Bible will educate a man if he studies them hard enough. They will first teach him his own language, and second awaken in him a thirst to know something about the many subjects to which they refer, and gradually he will find himself automatically storing away much valuable knowledge.

The study of one thing, followed persistently, leads to the study of many other subjects.

We are not particularly interested in Harvard's quest for Harvard's kind of an educated man. There are many very well educated men, hundreds of thousands of them, in this country, and among them, in time, they will so add to the general enlightenment that the uneducated man, rather than the educated man, will be hard to find.

"Fifty-Fifty!"

Meaning That While Tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN Will Be Strictly Neutral, as to the War in Europe, It Will Score One Hundred Points and Be the BEST SUNDAY NEWSPAPER PRINTED IN NEW ENGLAND

WE asked an office boy—a bright little office boy with the red hair that ALL office boys OUGHT to have—for a definition of "neutrality."

The answer of our young friend was helpful and illuminative:

"Fifty-fifty."

"And, Tommy," we said, "how do YOU stand, on this War in Europe?"

"Fifty-fifty," answered Mulvanity.

The Great War, after all, overshadows everything else in the world today.

Tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN, therefore, will have a "lot of war in it."

"Pro-Allies or Pro-German?" you may ask.

Fifty-fifty!

For example:

There is one young man in England who, it may be taken for granted, will never visit Berlin again without a disguise.

We refer to Mr. William Dyson. We promise to print, in the Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow, eight convincing reasons why Brother Dyson will be a candidate for a wooden kimono any time he chooses to select Unter den Linden for a sauntering place.

Dyson is the most popular cartoonist in Britain.

Dyson's book, "Kultur Cartoons," is far and away the best seller at all the book stalls on J. Bull's right little tight little island.

Every one in England, we are told, is pleased with the Dyson book except King George and his Queen. SOME of the cartoons appear to be levelled against "caste." This is displeasing to royalty.

With the cartoons before us, as you shall have them tomorrow, we can readily understand why German points will be omitted from William Dyson's next tour of Europe. The cartoon "Modern Science and Prehistoric Savagery" would alone be reason enough, we should say, while "Cultured Warfare"—but wait until you see THAT!

Another striking pro-Allies feature of the Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow will be a contribution by Mr. Guglielmo Ferrero, distinguished historian, entitled, "Europe a War Camp if Germans Win."

AND ON THE OTHER HAND—

On the other hand, an entire page of the Sunday AMERICAN is given over to Friedrich von Bernhardi, presenting "Germany's Answer to England."

In all modesty we may safely claim THIS presentation of the German case, by General von Bernhardi, to be the MOST IMPORTANT statement of the German argument printed in an American newspaper since the war began.

Von Bernhardi, a general of cavalry in the German army, is the author of "Our Future" and "Germany and the Next War," volumes which, by some opponents of the German Empire, are declared to have been in part responsible for the beginning of the conflict.

In his Sunday AMERICAN article, Von Bernhardi explains and justifies his books.

At the hour of going to press the United States, as to the War in Europe, was STILL a neutral nation. We all hope it may CONTINUE to be a neutral nation, the friend of every people at war, the enemy of none.

This is undoubtedly the greatest war in all history, however, and we all want to be informed about it. Being neutral does not mean that we are to care nothing about the right or wrong of the calamity which has fallen upon Europe. On the contrary, in ORDER to be neutral we have GOT to be INFORMED.

Inform yourself by hearing both sides as spokesmen for the nations present their views in the always interesting and informing columns of the Sunday AMERICAN.

Begin tomorrow, if you have not already begun, a study of the Sunday AMERICAN series of war papers, by reading the contributions of Ferrero and Von Bernhardi. And, unless you have made up your mind to stand with Germany, right or wrong, you may also want to study William Dyson's "Kultur Cartoons."

These, by the way, are cartoons without a laugh in them.

Meanwhile we are PLEASED to report, bearing out all that was said last Sunday about the business revival in the United States, that things continue to be perking up.

Everybody appears to be agreed that the condition of the steel business is still the great Barometer of Business, and we are officially and authoritatively informed that the unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation increased 100,000 tons in the month of February, that every department of the works at Homestead is now active, and that 4,000 men have been put to work.

So, you see!

The Sunday AMERICAN declaration that the worst is over was really the First Robin of an American Springtime Prosperity.

Disliking everything that even SAVORS of braggadocio, we refrain from pointing out how accurately the Sunday AMERICAN told what was about to happen in last Tuesday's municipal election at Cambridge. Tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN follows up, on the subject of Cambridge, with a few well chosen remarks about some Cambridge drug stores and some Cambridge pony expresses. These are vehicles by which Cambridge, shuddering piously and voting "No License," continues to be supplied with red liquor.

Worth reading in whatever No License section of Greater Boston you happen to sleep o' nights and go to church o' Sundays.

The Rev. Billy Sunday in the Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow discusses the MODERN DANCE. "The tango," Mr. Sunday says, "is the most stinking, licentious thing that ever wriggled out of the pit of hell." And more—much more—to the same effect.

Mother Jones, well-known as a very able organizer of the Mine Workers of America, discusses Womanhood. "I didn't see the women rising en masse," she says, "for their stricken sisters of Colorado, Calumet and West Virginia during the mine-strike riots, and God knows they needed help as much as the Belgians, and do yet."

Makes you think.

How Dan Coleman, the comedian of Harry Hastings' Big Show, opening Monday night at Waldron's Casino, has been planning all the season on the house he will build this year in Belmont, will interest OTHER loving husbands—whether they like burlesque or not—and OUGHT to have an effect on the building business in beautiful Belmont.

With pictures by Jack Bliss.

For the ladies—bless them!—in addition to all that has gone before, a Lady Duff-Gordon page, in which the famous creator of fashions discusses the "Zebra" dresses and chats of the new black and whites, the plain new stripes, and the VERY gorgeous new linings.

Illustrated, OF course.

Half a page, moreover, of the increasingly popular Sunday AMERICAN patterns.

AND the "Panama Polka," sixth in the "Dance Songs of Grace Darling."

Calling attention, finally, to the Sunday AMERICAN feature par excellence, a study of Rudolph and Maranville, of the Boston Braves, in the nude, at Macon, by Mr. Julian Hawthorne, one of America's most distinguished journalists.

Julian Hawthorne's contributions to the Sunday AMERICAN, from the Stallings camp at Macon, have been the literary sensation of the Spring training season. Hawthorne has made baseball interesting to the literary elite, literature appealing to dyed-in-the-wool fans.

Having the journalistic instinct, Mr. Hawthorne succeeded the other day in inducing Dick and the Rabbit to pose for him alongside some figures of the athletes of Ancient Greece.

SEE the pictures and READ the Hawthorne summing up, exclusively in the Sunday AMERICAN!

Do you happen to know ANYBODY in New England who deals in malicious gossip, wholesale or retail? Direct her attention to the Sunday AMERICAN feature-editorial, on "The Poison-Monger." (Warranted to cure.)

And do you LOVE children?

Two pages more of the loveliest little ones of Greater Boston, garbed by Sunday AMERICAN artists in quaint costumes from quaint countries.

Recipe for a profitable and pleasant Sunday:

Go to church AND read the Sunday AMERICAN.
